Inland Steel Recognizes C.I.O.; Militia Demobilized

Pickets Called Off By Strike Leader

Sheet & Tube Agreement Next Goal of Indiana's Gov. Townsend.

By the Associated Press.

East Chicago, Ill., June 30—C. I. O. strikers at the Inland Steel Co. plant here were informed late tonight by their leaders that the "strike is off" in Indiana, and that they are to return to work when the company reopens at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

No agreement was signed between the companies and the strikers. Separate agreements between the Governor and the company and the Governor and the C. I. O. provided the basis of settlement, it was announced.

The company recognizes C. I. O. as the bargaining agent for members of that union only.

The men return without discrimination and with a provision that grievances not settled between the men and the company are to be taken to the State Labor Department for adjudication. More than 12,000 employes are affected.

The Governor was seeking late tonight a similar agreement with Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., having mills in this area, but at Youngstown, Ohio, the president of that company, Frank Purnell, said: "We will sign no agreement with C. I. O."

The agreement concerning Inland Steel was given the "full approval" of Philip Murray, chairman of S. W. O. C., the C. I. O. affiliate which called the strike.

Salient Points.

Salient points of the Inland settlement as announced by Thomas R. Hutson, State labor commissioner, are:

The Inland agrees to recognize the Steel Workers Organizing Committee as the collective bargaining agency for all members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

There will be no discrimination or intimidation.

The company recognizes the right of employes to bargain individually.

Workers are granted an eight-hour day and a 40-hour week with time and one-half for overtime.

Employes with five or more years of continuous service are to receive a week's vacation with pay.

Seniority is to be recognized in making promotions.

The company can discharge any employe for cause.

Townsend directed immediate demobilization of 3,600 Indiana National Guardsmen he had directed to report "for training purposes" at their barracks throughout the northern part of the State.

Pickets Called Off.

Bittner, who had been in conference with the Governor throughout the evening, sent telegrams to strike leaders in the Calumet district telling them "to get every man off the picket lines." He gave additional instructions to "let no one interfere with the return to work."

Announcement of the agreement provoked a wild demonstration in the steel district here.

Grim picket lines were transformed into a cheering throng of several hundred men who formed a parade and marched around the Inland plant for three blocks and then to strike headquarters.

Canton, Ohio, June 30.—In Ohio's Mahoning Valley strike front union leaders were considering the calling of a general strike to check the back-to-work movement under which the mills say they are rapidly reaching a pre-strike normalcy of operations.

Other producers affected by the seven-State strike are Republic Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Board Chairman Tom Girdler of Republic Steel said tonight the C. I. O. had been "defeated."

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

Christiana Hundred, Del., June 30.—America's own royal romance ended here this afternoon in the marriage of the third son of President Roosevelt and the favorite daughter of the duPont clan in little Christ Church.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., boyish and solemn, and Ethel duPont were made man and wife by the clergyman who united the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, 80-year-old Rev. Endicott Peabody.

On the left side of the church sat the duPonts. Directly across from them sat the Roosevelts, whose politics are so directly opposed to the family of the bride as to have brought upon this union Capulet and Montagu references as soon as the romance of the young people began three-and-half years ago.

The Rev. Mr. Peabody pronounced them man and wife shortly after 4 p. m., and the Roosevelts, on their side of the aisle, and the duPonts, on their side, smiled in mutual joy.

There were more smiles at the reception at Owls Nest where President Roosevelt and Eugene duPont, the bride's father, met following the ceremony. The men exchanged hearty greetings, both grinning broadly as duPont, bowing, welcomed the New Deal President, and

Police Faced With Photos Of Beatings

Chicago Official Admits Scene in Picture Is 'Brutal.'

By Robert C. Albright.

A police commissioner and three Chicago police captains yesterday sought to justify Memorial Day strike killings in the face of pictorial evidence of retreating strikers, swinging batons and leveled police pistols.

An autopsy report showing seven of the ten dead in South Chicago's steel clash were shot in the back was laid before the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee, as a Senate investigation moved under way.

The report showed the remaining three were shot in the side, according to Senator Robert M. La Follette, committee chairman. Evidence from Chicago medical authorities, that shots were fired from .38-caliber pistols of the type used by Chicago police, also was laid before the committee.

Questioned Six Hours.

For six hours the committee questioned Police Commissioner James P. Allman, Capt. John C. Pendergast, chief of Chicago's uniformed police, and Police Capts. James L. Mooney and Thomas Kilroy on details of the May 30 rout of 2,500 labor demonstrators by 300 Chicago police.

Only the last of the four witnesses, Capt. Kilroy, second in command of the police brigade admitted evidence of what La Follette called police "brutality."

"Aren't you ashamed of that?"

Kilroy flushed, but did not answer.

"Isn't this brutal?" La Follette pressed.

"Yes, it is," said the officer.

Another picture in evidence showed Kilroy looking on while one officer was using his club on a prostrate marcher; a second officer was pulling a civilian to his feet, as a third policeman swung his baton at the man being pulled.

Thinks He "Stopped It."

"It looks like they are posing for a picture," Kilroy first ventured.

"Don't you want to withdraw that statement?" said La Follette. "One man has his hands to his head to ward off a blow." Kilroy agreed.

"Do these sort of police tactics meet with your approval?" asked La Follette.

"No, sir," said Kilroy.

"Why didn't you stop it?" said La Follette.

"I had just come up," said Kilroy. "I think I did stop it."

"It seems to me you were looking on," said the Senator. "What do you have to say about it."

The witness did not answer.

Yesterday's testimony was prelude to a showing, probably this afternoon, of a suppressed news reel of the fighting at Republic Steel Corporation's strike-bound south Chicago plant. Yesterday's witnesses were asked to return today when strike pickets also will be placed on the stand.

Meantime, Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, in a speech to the House, declared John L. Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization will move toward civil war and "labor despotism" unless checked.

Cox "Warns" Lewis.

"I warn John L. Lewis and his communistic cohorts," said Cox, "that no second 'carpet-bag expedition' into the Southland, under the red banner of Soviet Russia and concealed under the slogan of the C. I. O., will be tolerated." He said the "flower of Southern manhood" would meet any attempt to "demoralize our industry" or "incite race hatreds."

Representative J. William Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania, addressed a letter to Secretary of Labor Perkins renewing his request for "clarification" of the department's policy toward sit-down strikes. Ditter said "the recent policy of the Federal Government in temporizing with the defiance of court order" had contributed toward "the prevailing spirit of lawlessness in the States."

A resolution by Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, seeking information from Secretary Perkins on the steel mediation board, and asking whether

1-3 Capacity Ship Subsidy Starts Today

Merchant Fleet 'Second to None' Is Aim of Government.

Initial Saving Will Be $3,000,000, Officials Point Out.

By William V. Nesslv.

One-third of the American ships engaged in world commerce today will begin operating under the new United States subsidy plan, replacing the much controverted ocean mail contract system, as another step in the vast plan designed to give this country a merchant marine second to none.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission, last night announced details of the agreements reached with 23 ship companies holding 32 of the 43 ocean mail contracts, before expiration of the time limit set by law for the end of the mail contracts, last midnight.

Two phases of activity were involved, the settlement of claims arising from abrogation of the old ocean mail contracts, and the granting of operating subsidies "to place American ships in a proper competitive position with foreign vessels.

Salient points of the agreements are:

Aggregate claims of $73,000,000 made by the companies against the Government, including some $52,000,000 sought as balance to be paid if the contracts were permitted to run their course, were settled at a net cost to the Government of less than $750,000.

$4,600,000 Subsidy.

Subsidy grants were limited to six months in order to determine the financial responsibility of the companies and ability to comply with capital and other requirements of the merchant marine act.

A few agreements provide for payment to the Government of an aggregate of about $600,000, though "it should be observed that no inference of improper conduct should be drawn from the fact of these payments.

Net estimated subsidy to 16 lines covering 22 of the old ocean mail routes, for the next six months, was placed at $4,600,000, as compared with $7,600,000, which would have been paid under the contracts, a reduction of about 40 per cent. However the subsidy is subject to revision based on actual operating costs.

The contractors agree to develop a long-range shipbuilding program.

The Government will receive all profits of any line, in excess of 12 per cent of the capital investment, until the subsidy has been recovered.

The operating subsidy is based on the difference in cost of operating American ships and foreign vessels competing on the same lines.

Labor Situation.

Asked if he expected unanimity of views among labor representatives in view of the new struggle between John L. Lewis and William Green, heads of the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., respectively, to control maritime labor, he replied the commissioners were "hoping and praying" for such a situation.

Agreements have not been reached with the Dollar Steamship Lines, Inc., Ltd., Munson Steamship Line, United Fruit Co., Waterman Steamship Corporation and the American Line Steamship Corporation, it was announced. A tentative settlement has been reached with the Tacoma Oriental Steamship Co., but has not been reduced to writing.

Adjustment of the Dollar lines' claims, it was said, has been delayed pending receipt of "essential" information on the company and completion of arrangements for additional capital. The Munson Line claims were expected to be adjusted very shortly, while offers of settlement from the three remaining companies have been held unacceptable, though negotiations are completed.

American Diamond Lines, Inc., $179,768; American Scantic Lines, Inc., $234,500; American South African Line, Inc., $97,500; Atlantic and Caribbean Steam Navigation Co., $100,000; Baltimore Mail Steamship Co., $233,166; Colombian Steamship Co., Inc., $101,430; Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., $98,133.50; Export Steamship Corporation, $466,000; Grace Lines, Inc., $650,000; Lykes Brothers (Group), $814,940; Mississippi Shipping Co., Inc., $186,600;

Russia, Japan Mobilize; Soviet Gunboat Is Sunk; Ultimatum for Moscow

Russian Gunboat Sunk on 'Invasion'

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Japanese army communiques reported a Russian gunboat had been sunk, another damaged and a third repulsed at Blagoveschensk, on the Amur River. The report stated that the three Soviet boats were "invading" Manchukuoan territory. Map shows location of the engagement.

Japanese Cabinet Says Peace Depends Upon Russian Retreat.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, July 1.—The Japanese Cabinet decided in an emergency session today the Russo-Japanese crisis could be settled peaceably only if the Soviet immediately withdrew all armed forces from territory claimed by the Japanese-inspired state of Manchoukuo.

The combined armies of Japan and Manchoukuo, the cabinet's announcement said, were prepared for any eventuality if Russia assumed a warlike attitude.

The cabinet's decision was immediately sent to Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in Moscow who presented the virtual ultimatum, demanding immediate withdrawal of all Russian troops, to the Soviet government.

Japanese newspapers charged that Russia has a fleet of 40 warships, heavy contingents of troops, airplanes and tanks ready for action along the Amur River on the Siberian frontier, where three Russian gunboats were reported yesterday to have engaged in battle with Japanese-Manchukuoan artillery.

One Russian gunboat was sunk, another disabled and a third forced to flee, Japanese army advices said in an account of yesterday's battle off Sennufu Island, one of a small group claimed both by Manchukuo and Russia.

Describing the Soviet flotilla which figured in the Amur River clash, the newspaper Asahi said the fleet was composed of 40 modern warcraft.

300,000 Soviet Troops.

Some were heavy gunboats, the paper said, and others were of shallow draft. At least ten were said to be 1,000-ton boats, carrying 4.8-inch guns.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi declared Russian troops had mobilized along the river between Khabarovsk, Siberia, and Blagoveshchensk, ready for action.

There were 300,000 troops, including infantry divisions and three cavalry divisions, Nichi Nichi said, and 1,000 airplanes, 600 armored motor trucks and 1,000 tanks.

Japanese forces also are being established along the river area, advices here said.

Asahi declared the situation was fraught with grave possibilities because huge forces of Soviet and Japanese-Manchukuoan fighters faced each other along the river banks, while the Russian naval force allegedly loitered along the Amur channel.

Parleys in Moscow.

Foreign office officials professed hope the incident would be settled by diplomatic means. (The Japanese Ambassador to Moscow was in midnight conference with the Russian foreign office.)

Army, navy and cabinet officers, however, were in urgent night-long conferences, presumably mapping a curse of action.

Japanese army reports said the Russian vessels in yesterday's clash "invaded" the Amur channel and opened fire against soldiers who were bathing.

Congress Urged To Adopt Lump Sum Fund Plan

President's Committee Courts Wrath in Opposing Earmarkings.

By Russell Smith

Inviting Congressional wrath, President Roosevelt's administrative management committee yesterday offered to legislators a recommendation that lump sum appropriations be made for operation of the Government instead of "detailed" earmarkings.

Additionally, the committee report, one of a series intended to strengthen the case for the President's reorganization proposals, sharply condemned present fiscal setup of the Government and urged revision of the Treasury, the Budget Bureau and the General Accounting Office.

Congress repeatedly has shown, in the recent past, its impatience with the lump sum appropriation method, which transfers much power from the Appropriations Committee to officials in executive departments.

Instances were the short-lived but bitter revolt of the House on the relief bill and the statement of Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, that he never will vote for another lump sum supply bill.

Discussing reasons for advocating lump sum allotments, the report, prepared for the committee by A. E. Buck and Harvey C. Mansfield, said:

"Aside from the organizational changes suggested above, budget making would be greatly facilitated by a substantial reduction in the number of appropriation items. Such a step would improve the exercise of budgetary control over expenditures and at the same time would make for departmental economy.

"Congress has not followed a uniform scheme in itemizing appropriations. Some appropriations, running into millions or even billions of dollars, are made up in lump sum amounts, whereas others, containing only a $10,000, are highly detailed.

"Most of the appropriations, however, are detailed. It is this minute segregation that adds scores of pages to the appropriation acts. In fact the regular appropriation acts for each fiscal year usually run around 350 pages in the Federal statutes.

"The itemization of appropriations has gone so far that it often enables Congress to brush aside the Executive and to control the Administration directly through detailed specifications in the granting of money."

On fiscal reorganization, the re-

DuPonts Head Fourteen Listed As Tax-Dodgers

Yachts, Estates, Stables, Homes Incorporated, Treasury Charges.

By Sidney Olson.

The newest Treasury roll call of tax avoiders named 14 wealthy persons who were said to have saved themselves more than $1,500,000 in taxes during the past few years. As disclosed by the Treasury in the joint Congressional hearings yesterday, the list follows:

Alfred P. Sloan jr., of Great Neck, L. I., chairman of the board of General Motors Corporation, for incorporating his yacht Rene.

Mrs. Emily R. Cadwalader, prominent Philadelphia resident, daughter of the late John A. Roebling, Newark wire-rope cable manufacturer, for incorporating her yacht, the 410-foot steam yacht Savarona (German-built), reputedly the largest yacht in the world.

The late Alfred duPont, former head of the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., for incorporating a palatial home in Wilmington, Del.

Incorporated Home.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, and his wife, for incorporating their home and properties in Locust Valley, N. Y.

John Hay (Jock) Whitney, famous New York and Virginia horseman, for incorporating his racing stables, the Llangollen Stables, Inc.

Mrs. Wilhelmina duPont Ross, of Wilmington, member of the duPont family, for incorporating her racing stable, farms, gas leases and securities.

(Mrs. Ross is the woman who, the Treasury says, paid her husband a salary each year since 1931 for managing her estate and corporation. Donald P. Ross received a total of $87,000 from his wife as salary for the last six years, the Treasury officials said, and "has had very little income in addition to this salary.")

Mrs. Ethel Mars, of Oak Park, Ill., manufacturer of the candy bar known as "The Milky Way," for incorporating her estate.

Ronald Tree, of Chicago, who inherited wealth from two estates, that of his grandfather, Lambert Tree, and that from his wife's grandfather, Marshall Field, founder of the Chicago department store, for "overcapitalizing" three Canadian holding companies and claiming "artificial and fictitious deductions."

Mrs. Nathan L. Miller, wife of the former Republican Governor of New York, who was prominent in the Liberty League and who is

Duke of Windsor Resents Remarks On Father's Rites

London, June 30 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor tonight received from his former aide, Sir Gerald Wollaston, a statement of regret for remarks on funeral arrangements for the late King George V.

"A rotten story," the duke was revealed to have described Sir Gerald's remarks in a statement to the Evening Standard.

Sir Gerald, whose chief task as garter king of arms is to proclaim the accession of England's kings, told a Lyceum Club dinner last night:

"Less time was allowed for funeral arrangements to be made than ever before. We had only one week, although I thought at the time we could not possibly make it. King Edward insisted that the funeral must take place at the end of the week."

Unknown Fleet Demonstrates Off Minorca

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain, June 30.—The defense ministry tonight announced a naval demonstration by "a fleet of unknown nationality" occured off the Balearic Island of Minorca with seven warships participating in warlike array.

At the same time Foreign Minister Jose Giral Pereira accused unnamed foreign powers of recent submarine attacks on Spanish vessels and reiterated charges that new Italian troops have arrived to aid the insurgents.

The commander of the Port Mahon naval base at Minorca reported to the ministry that the naval demonstration occurred at 11 p. m. last night.

Seven warships took part, he said, and "one ship remained a short distance offshore with searchlight ablaze lighting up the whole coast."

The vessels divided shortly thereafter and four steamed away northwest. Two others, although they moved slowly out of range of the

Cabinet Lifts Gold Content Limit on Franc

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 30.—Camille Chautemps' government, equipped with dictatorial power over French finances, cut the franc loose from its gold-content limitation tonight.

The cabinet acted swiftly after the Senate, following the Chamber of Deputies' lead, passed the bill granting the government full authority until August 31 to deal with the financial crisis.

It abolished the restriction of the monetary law of last October, which set the gold content of the franc at 43 to 49 milligrams (20.15 to 22.96 francs to the dollar), leaving the French monetary unit to find its own level.

Financial authorities declared the move was designed to permit the franc to decrease in value in relation to foreign currencies, check the flow of gold from France and stimulate export of French goods because they would be cheaper abroad than previously.

Under the 43-milligram minimum,

Garment Workers Get Pay Rise and 32½-Hour Week

New York, June 30 (AP).—An agreement providing for a 32½-hour week, claimed as the shortest work week in United States industry, has removed the threat of a strike by 35,000 metropolitan-area cloakmakers, the International Ladies Garment Workers Union announced today.

While immediate wage increases are promised, the hour clause will not become effective until June, 1939. David Dubinsky, union president, said the delay was provided to avoid conflict with union contracts in other areas that do not expire until 1939.

The agreement, described as a three-year contract, calls for a 10 per cent increase in piece workers' earnings and a flat $5 a week rise for salaried employes.

Ex-Sailor, Identified as Man In Park, Held in Girls' Slaying

By the Associated Press.

Inglewood, Calif., June 30.—Police said tonight Mrs. Jenny Vise and Helen Diard had "positively identified" Luther Dow, 33, former sailor, as the man they saw playing in a park last Saturday with three Inglewood children who later were slain.

Police Capt. Hubert Wallis said the women, who live near Centinela Park, from where the children disappeared last Saturday, stated they saw Dow talking to the little girls, Madeline and Melba Everett, and Jeanette Marjorie Stephens.

Dow was booked in Los Ageles on a charge of suspicion of murder and brought here, where he was to be confronted by Olive Everett, 11, sister of Madeline and Melba, and by other persons who saw a man known only as "Eddie the Sailor" drive away with the murder victims in an old automobile.

Police said Dow had scratches on his chest, stomach, shoulders, hips and arms. They said he was wearing dungarees that had been freshly washed, and had a handkerchief and a skate key which relatives of the Everett sisters said looked "just like" a handkerchief and key the tots had, and which have been missing.

Capt. Wallis said Dow admitted serving prison sentences at San Quentin prison. He said Dow also admitted he was dishonorably discharged from the Navy.

28,000 Cheering Scouts and Leaders Open Jamboree, Hear Roosevelt Greetings Read

Pictures on Pages 3, 4 and 16.

Packed solidly in a whooping, cheering mass at the base of Washington Monument, 28,000 American and foreign Boy Scouts and Scout leaders last night opened America's first National Jamboree with a campfire program such as Washington has never seen.

Approximately 40,000 persons witnessed the picturesque inaugural ceremonies, at which President Roosevelt's greetings were read by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and campfire stories were told by Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Twenty-five thousand were Boy Scouts, another 3,000 were Scout leaders and the remainder were outsiders attracted by the cheering, the fires and the music.

The Monument has looked down upon greater throngs, as on July 4 fireworks displays, but never before has it been host to the type of celebration staged on its north slope last night.

Launching a ten-day Jamboree, the campfire assembly gave an ovation to "Uncle Dan" Beard, beloved National Scout Commissioner and one of the founders of the movement, poured its voices exultantly into Scout songs and yelled itself hoarse in tribute to Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive.

Though rain fell intermittently almost up to the very moment "Uncle Dan" lighted the fires by striking steel against flint to produce sparks which ignited a torch, the program was carried out under near-ideal weather conditions.

Twelve thousand of the youths jammed the bleacher seats which have been erected for the arena displays that open tonight. Another 15,000 to 16,000 squatted on the greensward, their ponchos affording protection against the damp earth.

When the boys rose to sing their song, "Hail Scouting Spirit," to the tune of "My Hero" from "The Business Levy Row Deadlocks D. C. Tax Study

Officials Predict Financial Crisis Unless Loans Can Be Obtained.

By James D. Secrest.

Diversity of opinions yesterday prevented the Senate District Committee from reaching any decision on local taxes at a two-hour executive session with the Commissioners.

Chairman King said the committee discussed the varied proposals in and out of the bill as passed by the House but came to no agreement. It also listened to the views of the Commissioners and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

Another executive session was scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon, but Senator King expressed doubt that an accord will be reached for several days.

District officials told the committee however, that unless tax legislation, or at least authority to obtain loans from the Federal Treasury, is enacted into law before July 15 the city government will be faced with a grave fiscal crisis.

With coats off the Senators tackled the tax problem after public hearings were concluded shortly after noon. One by one they dropped out of the meeting shaking their heads gravely before the recess was taken.

Senator King said the only thing agreed upon was that the chain store tax was eliminated. This was, in effect, done on the first day of the three-day hearing.

The major point of the controversy in the committee is the business privilege tax. Minor differences exist as to amendments to other provisions of the bill.

A sales tax still is under consideration, it is understood, although members are frankly skeptical of its likelihood of passing either House.

Gross Receipts Amendment.

The other principal alternative appears to be a modification of the gross receipts tax to remove some of its inequities. Chairman King indicated a preference for this solution at conclusion of the hearing.

Next in line is a stiff increase in the realty rate as applied to land only. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, is the major proponent of this plan. He suggested a 1 per cent or $1 boost in the $1.50 rate.

District officials, however, indicated they would fight such a tax when Auditor Donovan clashed with McCarran over the significance of it.

Donovan pointed out that 1 per cent increase, which would raise an estimated $5,000,000, would amount to a 30 per cent boost in the realty tax burden. That, he maintained, would be distinctly unfair to home owners and realty property holders who now bear an undue share of the municipal tax burden.

Income Tax Is Weak.

Only one other tax proposed would be capable of raising enough revenue to be substituted for the business privilege levy. That is the income tax, and Chairman King and other members of the committee are convinced that it would never be acceptable to the House in any form at this stage.

The Commissioners traced the entire history of the tax legislation in the House. They explained their preference for a sales tax after encountering the complexities of a business privilege tax and recounted the House sub-committee's rejection of it.

They also reiterated their fear that serious amendment of the House bill might result in a Senate-House deadlock that would prove disastrous to the District fiscal set-up.

While several of the committee members have suggested higher taxes on liquors and levies on beer and ale and other possible sources of additional revenue, none of them would produce enough returns to make up the $3,500,000 to $5,000,000 expected from a business privilege tax.

Sales Tax Denounced.

Notably inarticulate for the first two days, Washington citizens, especially Federal workers, appeared before the Senate committee at the morning session and denounced the sales tax.

The most emphatic objections came from Sidney R. Katz, spokesmen for a group of WPA workers, Arthur Bernstein, of the Inter-Union Council, and Alex Nordholm, of the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation.

They assailed both the sales tax proposal and the gross receipts tax, asserting the latter would be passed along to the consumer. They also objected to an increase in the realty tax, but leaned toward a land value rate hike and urged an income levy.

A realty tax increase, they argued, would be passed along by landlords to renters.

Samuel L. Gottlieb, a contractor and taxpayer, suggested that the present realty tax system is obsolete and that the levy should be based on the value of land and the income potentiality of improvements.

"If a man lives in his home," he said, "he should be taxed according to the income his property would bring if he rented it."

He proposed a sliding scale tax on gross receipts with an initial exemption of $10,000.

Just a few hours before the end of the fiscal year President Roosevelt yesterday signed the District supply bill carrying $45,915,641 in appropriations for the year beginning today.

The $5,000,000 Federal payment is expected to meet municipal expenses until the omnibus tax bill is passed, and the District is authorized to obtain temporary loans from the Federal Treasury.

Transfer of the administration of Gallinger Hospital and the Tuberculosis Sanatoria from the welfare to the health department will be effected at once under the bill.

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, reported on a visit to New York to check on the application of a gross receipts tax there.

He said the levy was one-tenth of 1 per cent, or about a sixth of the three-fifths of 1 per cent proposed for the District, and that exemptions were up to $15,000, instead of $1,000, as in the House bill.

Among other witnesses were Dr. David J. Fitzgibbon, of the District Dental Society, and Charles H. Tompkins, of the District Chapter, Associated General Contractors. Both opposed the business privilege tax.

President's Recent Subtle Attacks on Press, Photographic Ban Stir Dictatorship Thoughts!

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

This column is not addicted to screaming about the threat of dictatorship facing this country in the person of President Roosevelt, and when others have engaged in such talk we have regarded it as somewhat silly. Nor do we now take any stock in this talk of a Roosevelt dictatorship, chiefly because it is necessary for a dictator to know what he wants to do, and because we still have a great faith in the American people.

But even though the talk of a dictator appears to be a bugaboo used by economic royalists and Republicans to scare people who do not scare easily, it might be well to take a look around us and see what is happening. Perhaps the dictator might arrrive, just as the wolf in the storybook did, because the cry of "dictator" has lulled us into indifference.

Since suppression of the press is the hallmark of dictators, let us see what is happening in that quarter. Much has been said and written about the pleasant relations which exist between the President and the press. The White House press conferences are just like one big, happy, laughing family. The annual press receptions at the White House have become one of the Capital's social events. There is more freedom than under any previous Administration to ask the President questions—that is, if you do not mind being characterized in public as a dunce or an ignoramus.

All is not beer and pretzels, however, between the President and the press. For some months, especially since the last election, the White House has displayed an increasing contempt for the press. The President has complained to editors about the Washington correspondents. Certain writers with national reputations have been characterized as only 40 per cent accurate by the President and other Administration officials. It is a coincidence how all those under fire attain the exact degree of inaccuracy.

At virtually every press conference the President makes some sally at the press. Proper questions, asked in good faith and courteously, are met with remarks obviously designed to make the questioner an object of ridicule. This week, for instance, the reporters were told they did not know the difference between dollars and cents, although their publishers did. Two of the group were told they were dunces and should don dunce-hats and take a place in the corner. Oh, it is all done in apparent good humor and it appears very funny to the juveniles—but it is mighty effective in restricting the freedom of this press conference.

Now for the first time the White House has proceeded to take punitive action against a section of the press. In the past there have been rare occasions when a single man was singled out for discipline or has been regarded as persona non grata. But never before has the White House sought to punish a large section of the American press until this week.

The incident concerns the recent Democratic harmony weekend at Jefferson Island. Photographers and reporters were banned from the island under an edict of Stephen T. Early, press secretary to the President. Early was quite within his rights and he cannot be criticized for anything he did to enforce his ban. But at the same time it is the duty of newspapers to get the news and to use all honorable methods of getting it—and photographs constitute news.

Two photographic agencies—serving a large number of American newspapers—apparently arranged in advance with several Congressmen to take pictures on the island. They have stated that they did not lend their equipment and that only amateur equipment was used. The photographs they received from the Congressmen they distributed to their clients. One was published in The Washington Post.

The photographic agencies which did not show such enterprise protested to Early. He has issued an edict instructing the Secret Service to prevent any representative of the two enterprising agencies from taking any pictures of the President or his activities for an indefinite period. Thus he undertakes to punish all newspapers subscribing to the service of these two agencies.

Heaven knows, the Republic will not come to an end if a number of American newspapers fail to publish pictures of the President for a few days. The incident itself is unimportant, except for the fact that it establishes a precedent and one which is strikingly similar to the technique of the totalitarian state. In countries ruled by dictators there is no room for enterprising newspapers or newspapermen. They are liquidated, to use an euphonious term. Only those newspapers which publish what the government desires—only those which conform to the regimentation—are permitted to exist.

Happily the American press remains unfettered. For some time to come, despite Early, it will publish what its editors want to publish. But the first hole in the dike has appeared. Already it is having its effect. Photographers, dependent on getting pictures to keep their jobs, are saying that Steve Early is a bad man to cross.

Reporters are wondering when Early will undertake to call them on the carpet and ban them from press conferences because he does not like what they write—or because they had a friendly Congressman write for them a story of what happened on Jefferson Island.

We know full well that Early did not act as part of any deliberately conscious plan to whittle away the liberties of the press. He in all probability will laugh heartily at such a suggestion. He is convinced of the righteousness of his decision.

But his action—and perhaps he does not realize it—is symptomatic of the state of mind of the White House. It is fretful under restraints—it does not like to be crossed by the press, Congress, the courts, the Comptroller General or anyone else. It is a dangerous state of mind and the sooner such an attitude is abandoned the better it will be for the country and for the White House occupants.

Nazis Ban Pigeon Feeding.

Search for Body In Severn Futile

Combined efforts of a naval search crew, including a diver, Boy Scout volunteers and Maryland police, failed yesterday to recover the body of Earl Capps, 15, 333 Seventeenth street southeast, who drowned Tuesday in the Severn River, near Cedar Point.

He was on an outing with four companions when he stepped into a deep spot. He was unable to swim.

'Heaven' Is Solvent.

New York, June 30 (U.P.).—"Heaven" was declared solvent today by Supreme Court Justice McCook, who denied an application of a former angel for the appointment of a temporary receiver for Father Devine's "heaven." The application was made by Mrs. Verinda Brown, who sought to recover $4,476 she allegedly turned over to the cult leader.

Girl Dies in Hospital Where She Gave Roses

Claremore, Okla., June 30 (AP).—Two weeks ago 7-year-old Dorothy Lou Gravitt walked into a hospital here and said:

"I just brought roses for a lady—just any lady." Attendants learned her mother was in a distant sanitarium and "that is too far away for me to take flowers so I brought some for a lady here."

Sunday the child returned to the hospital—this time critically ill with typhoid meningitis. She died today in a room townspeople had filled with flowers.

Van Zeeland Optimistic.

New York, June 30 (AP).—Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium sailed homeward today "extremely optimistic" over his recent world economic stabilization conversations in Washington, but declining to discuss details of the negotiations.

Present at the banquet were J. Frank Brown, chairman of the group and controller of the S. Kahn Co.; J. C. Godwin, assistant controller of Woodward & Lothrop; Harold G. Malone, a director of the national association and controller of the Hecht Co.; Frank Hisey, secretary and treasurer of the group.

New Romance Again Costars Powell, Rainer

"Emperor's Candlesticks" Comes to the Capitol; Next Week's Bills.

William Powell and Luise Rainer, already seen together on the screen in "Escapade" and "The Great Ziegfeld," are costarred again in "The Emperor's Candlesticks," opening tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is described as a thrilling romance, alive with excitement and flavored with a touch of "Thin Man" gayety. Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan and Henry Stephenson head the supporting cast. On the stage the etertainment will be provided by an all-new Maj. Bowes Amateur Revue, presented in 11 diversified acts. The bill will be completed by the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture.

"Mountain Music," Paramount's first costarring vehicle for the droll talents of Bob Burns and Matha Raye, will be the chief film offering at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The supporting cast in this hilarious hillbilly musical includes, among others, John Howard, Terry Walker, George Hayes, Fuzzy Knight, Rufe Davis, Charles "Slim" Timblin, Spencer Charters, Olin Howland, Arthur Hohl, Rita La Roy, Louis Natbeaux and Charles Judels. The stage portion of the bill will present a novelty in the form of the "St. Moritz Ice Carnival," featuring Kit Klein, Olympic skating champion; Paul Howard, Charlie Hearn, Dick and Irene Meister, Charles Duff and the "Sixteen Queens of Ice." Eddie White, singing comedian, will be an added stage attraction.

"Manhattan Melodrama," in which the stellar roles are played by Clark Gable, William Powell and Myrna Loy, will be revived at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story concerns a big-time gambler and a district attorney who have been lifelong friends. Both love the same girl. They fight for her, each in his own way, on opposite sides of the law. The picture was directed by Woody S. Van Dyke. Short reel subjects and "Events of the Day" also will be shown.

Richard Dix is star of "The Devil Is Driving," the Columbia production which will open a week's engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. The story deals with the problem of reckless driving and is said to abound in thrills and tense dramatic situations. In the supporting cast are Joan Perry, Johnny Wray, Elisha Cook, jr., Ann Rutherford and Henry Kolker. Added short-reel subjects and full newsreel will complete the program.

That incomparable saga of the sea and a small boy's reformation, "Captains Corageous," will be continued for a third week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. The principal roles are played by Spencer Tracy, Freddie Bartholomew and Lionel Barrymore, supported by Melvyn Douglas, Charles Grapewin and a long list of others. The short subjects also are being held.

In addition to its extensive symposium of newsreel "shots" from all corners of the globe, the Trans-Lux Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow, also will show "Wings Over the West Indias," a travelogue embracing Cuga, Jamaica, Haiti, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; "Beach Sports," daredevil stunts indulged in at swanky resorts, and a cartoon comedy in color. Local news flashes constitute an important part of the program.

The Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, will revive "Clive of India," the story of the conquest of that country, with Ronald Colman and Loretta Young in the costellar roles. Others n the cast are the late Colin Clive, C. Aubrey Smith, Francis Lister, Cesar Romero, Montagu Love and Misha Auer. Short reels added.

"Ecstacy," the romantic tragedy that originally was barred from this country and has been a storm center of controversy ever since it was admitted, will continue through this week at the Belasco on its final Washington engagement. It probably will be followed by a return engagement of "Children of Loneliness," seen at the same house a short time ago.

The free swimming instruction that will be continued throughout the month of July begins today in the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo Park. Lessons will be given daily, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, with children taken from 10 to 10:30 a. m., adults from 10:30 to 11 and special night classes from 7 to 7:30 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Glen Echo Park is now running at top speed and is prepared to accomodate record Fourth of July crowds.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Suspense, Romance, Excitement Marshal Interest As Picture of International Intrigue Is Unfolded

"The Emperor's Candlesticks" Is Unique in Plot and Its Preservation of Czaristic Atmosphere; Capital Plans Tribute to Boy Scouts; Variety Club's Charity Boxing Show Sells; Vaudevillians at Earle.

THE difficult business of sustaining suspense and compounding cumulative interest in a story of international intrigue and the delivery of two silver candlesticks to a princess in Russia by an operative of the Polish Nationalists' secret service is consummated with extraordinary success in "The Emperor's Candlesticks," which was previewed by a small midnight group in Loew's Capitol Theater on Tuesday night.

BELL.

The narrative has been so deftly fashioned as to permit the audience to be "in" on most of the developments that transpire during a hectic chase that begins in Poland, reaches as far as Budapest and then returns through Paris and London, eventually to reach the Russian border and the St. Petersburg of the czaristic regime. During all of this time anything can happen as Baron Wolensky and the Countess Moronova, two of the cleverest secret agents in Europe, wage an unceasing battle of wits, and usually it does happen.

The customs, costumes and atmosphere of a remote era in European history have been caught with remarkable fidelity in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and the cast represents the cream of the players on the M.-G.-M. lot. William Powell and Luise Rainer are cast opposite each other for the third time since Miss Rainer's advent to American films in 1935. They are supported by a roster of principals that includes Henry Stephenson, Frank Morgan, Robert Young, Douglas Dumbrille, Emma Dunn, Frank Conroy, Maureen O'Sullivan and hosts of others.

There is no present intention to accord "The Emperor's Candlesticks" a formal review prior to Saturday, following its Friday opening on the Capitol screen, but it seems not out of place to emphasize the peculiarly effective manner in which this picture has caught the spirit and the powder-keg diplomatic relationships of neighboring nations at the time with which it deals. In watching the unreeling of the film, I was able to detect no instance of anachronism or any lapse from a rigid preservation of the rococco splendors of the period.

The promise of a double tragedy at the picture's denouement may be smoothed away a little too precipitately and the paths of the secret agents made a little too easy at the last minute, but in the large view "The Emperor's Candlesticks" is a welcome departure from the stereotyped modern drawing-room drama and parlor comedy that I feel sure will strike a responsive chord in the consciousness of habitual picture-goers and make them grateful for a subject that is distinctly "different."

The Roadside Theater, with its excellent performance of "Our American Cousin," the play President Lincoln was attending in Ford's Theater the night of his assassination by John Wilkes Booth, played to a standing-room crowd on Tuesday night. The play, of course, will be continued for a second week, beginning next Monday night. An interesting item to be noted by those who attend "Our American Cousin" is the framed facsimile of the program President Lincoln was holding when he was shot. It is a bona fide photostatic copy of the original.

Boasting color and novelty, special music and scenery, "The Saga of the Boy Scouts" promises to be one of the most ambitious overtures Phil Lampkin and the Capitol orchestra ever have undertaken. This special musical welcome to the Scouts Jamboree of 1937 will be presented as a special added attraction on the new program beginning tomorrow.

In music, tableau and song, "The Saga of the Boy Scouts" will depict the origin, development and present exalted stature of scoutdom, its creed and general inspiration to boyhood.

The following Washington boys have been engaged to appear in the tableau that will mark the climax of this musical innovation: Daniel Greenberg, Robert Haile, Joseph Giebel, Stephen Ackerman, Jules Bernard, Milton Greenbaum, Charles Englehart, Harry Snyder, Robert Moulton, Joseph Dempsey, Walter Ferber, jr., Charles Wilkins and Steve Zimmerman.

Tickets for the Variety Club's giant boxing show, to be held in Griffith Stadium on Tuesday night, July 20, under the sponsorship of The Washington Post, already have begun to move from the racks into the hands of eager customers, anxious to see Freddie Steele, world middleweight champion, in action against Charles "Hobo" Williams in the main bout of a top-notch card. Among the larger out-of-town orders already received was one from New York for 30 ringside seats and another from Roanoke, Va., for 25. In midtown Washington, the central box-office for the sale of tickets is the National Theater box-office.

It is interesting to note that when "Mountain Music" opens on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow, many standard vaudeville acts will be included in the cast to augment the comedy of Bob Burns, himself an old vaudevillian, and Martha Raye.

Among these will be Red Donohue and Uno, his comedy donkey; Charles "Slim" Timblin, a regular visitor to Washington stages; Rufe Davis, the "original radio rube," and Charles Judels.

"Slim" Timblin, best known as a blackface comedian, has been touring in the role of Jeeter Lester in a road company of "Tobacco Road," having rolled up a total run in the part of 84 weeks. Rufe Davis was seen on the Earle stage only a few weeks ago as a specialist with Guy Lombardo's orchestra. Charles Judels is apt to be found in any branch of the theater—straight drama, pictures, vaudeville, musical comedy, revue and whatnot.

There should be fun at the Earle. We shall see.

Since this seems to be almost exclusively a local column today, it might as well be remarked here as anywhere that that incorrigible and versatile young entertainer and master of ceremonies, Red Skelton, is coming back to Loew's Capitol Theater for a repeat engagement. His engagement will begin on Friday, July 9, which is by way of being only a week away. It is said that Red will bring an entirely new bag of tricks with him on this visit. If he does, he will be something of a genius. It was thought that Red had pretty thoroughly exhausted any single individual's capabilities on his first visit, so versatile were his performances.

Running-True-to-Form Note.

The weather man certainly put a crimp in yesterday's hot-weather last line. But that's the way life is.

Among the "New Faces of 1937"

HARRIET HILLIARD,

a recent visitor in Washington and in private life the wife of Ozzie Nelson, orchestra leader, is featured with Joe Penner, Milton Berle and Parkyakarkas in RKO-Radio's new musical production of "New Faces of 1937," which opened yesterday on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. She is looked upon by her producing company as potential star material. She can sing.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

NEW YORK, June 30.

EVERY PRECAUTION was taken to assure that no One-Eyed Connellys crashed the Roosevelt-duPont wedding. At many White House and other social functions, uninvited newspaper men have been securing admittance by arrangement made with the bandleader who officiates. The crashers merely sit with the violin section of the orchestra, and use a soaped bow—so that no music issues . . . Ten days ago Meyer Davis, who will conduct the band at the wedding, was asked to submit a list of the names, photographs and histories of each member of his band who will attend. Those records were checked by the police officials for ten days. Davis was informed that the list had been approved.

TWO LOCAL NEWSPAPERS, incidentally, on Saturday published photos of F. D. R., jr., and Adelaide Moffett Brooks attending a performance of "The Show Is On." They described Mrs. Brooks as "Ethel duPont." . . . It was a Winter Garden usher who discovered the mistake. He did this by offering a program to Mrs. Brooks, and asked: "Would you please autograph this for me, Miss duPont?" . . . "I'm sorry," was the reply, "but I'm not Miss duPont."

THE HOLLYWOOD FAD these days is to organize clubs. Robert Montgomery, who hates the sea, has organized the Death Valley Yacht Club . . . Dorothy Thompson has been signed to broadcast for a cigarette sponsor every Friday. She starts August 6 . . . Collections for a "Robert Irwin Defense Fund" already are being made in the Greenwich Village cafes. Two collectors came to Bill Bertolotti's and exhibited a long sucker-list . . . Barclay Beekman, the society reporter, will change his name to Barclay-7 Beekman-3.

GEORGE GERSHWIN, who is writing the music for the "Goldwyn Follies," attended a story conference there last week and played one of his new tunes, "Love Walked In." When the composer had finished, Musical Director Alfred Newman applauded. "Boy, when I get through with that swell tune, and 120 musicians working on it," he enthused to Gershwin, "—even you won't recognize it!"

AFTER FIVE YEARS' WORK James Peter Johnson has completed a symphonic arrangement of "St. Louis Blues" . . . Warner probably is backing Gilbert Miller's "Old Music." Jake Wilk, Warner's story-chief, is going to London to watch the dress-rehearsals of that play . . . Harry Richman and Hildegarde, who entertained the Londoners during the coronation season, had their dream of enrichment shattered—when Britain's income-tax collector snared $1.25 out of every $5 they earned . . . Spencer Tracy, taking direction from W. Van Dyke, turned practical joker and muffed his lines six times. When Van Dyke exploded and began calling names, Tracy calmly walked to a phone and shouted: "Get me Capra!"

• • • •

• • • •

ANNE NICHOLS' REVIVAL of "Abie's Irish Rose" lost $10,000—of Ed Wynn's money . . . Vera Zorina, the Norwegian actress who arrived to appear in the "Goldwyn Follies," had been scheduled to dance with Paul Draper in that film. Draper, however, refused to dance with any partner—and so the deal is off.

BERT LAHR and Reggie Gardiner, who left the cast of "The Show Is On" Saturday night, were the victims of practical jokes by the stage hands. The wrong records were played during Gardiner's band-conducting scene. And in Lahr's "Woodman" number, the hands—instead of throwing wood shavings—threw buckets and broomsticks . . . The Harlem Uproar House, closed for the summer, displayed a new sign last night: "Owner Gone Fishing. Back September 10."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Lady Encourages Widower, Wins His Love, Now Refuses to Marry Him; He Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a 43-year-old widower and for nearly a year have been trying to persuade a certain young lady to marry me. Her actions are most mystifying. During the early weeks of our friendship, she seemed to care for me and I let go completely. Then one evening, she kissed me good-by and asked me not to come again. I thought she was joking until I asked for another date, which she refused. She said "an old friend had come back," which I didn't believe, because she had previously told me there was no other man in her life. I repeatedly tried to see her after that, but to no avail. Then I started writing to her and she ignored my letters, until finally I sent flowers for her birthday, and she wrote to thank me.

• • • •

A mutual friend, with whom I discussed the matter, said it was possible I hadn't been definite enough about my intentions. So I wrote and proposed marriage. She took six pages to say how much she liked me, but not enough to marry me. Well, I moved to another city to try to forget her, after telling her this was what I intended to do. She asked me to let her know how I got along, which I wouldn't agree to do. I told her I would probably send her gifts from time to time (which I have done) but that I didn't want to hear from her (not even a note of thanks) unless and until she changed her mind.

• • • •

Well, I sent her a series of little gifts—and not long ago she wrote to tell me how much she enjoyed wearing a certain unusual little necklace I had sent her. The only reference she made to the proposal was indirectly. She said she wished someone else could make her decisions for her. She apologized, first and last, for writing at all. Immediately I wrote asking her to come to me, and to say when she was coming. I have heard nothing since. This was two weeks ago . . . She had told me several times in the past that there is "something in her life which nobody knows but herself" which prevents her marrying me. I have heard from others that she was once disappointed in love.

• • • •

On top of all this I learn indirectly through mutual friends that she seems to enjoy my attentions; that she doesn't mind being known as my "girl;" and that she was hurt when I had her return several love letters I had written to her.

The question is: Should I take myself by the back of the neck and force myself into the society of other women, even though I don't enjoy it? Or should I continue trying to win this girl? If so, what line should I follow? Sometimes I think I may have made my feeling too apparent. Thanking you for any advice, I am, very truly yours,

WIDOWER.

Futile Courtship.

DEAR WIDOWER: There's nothing very admirable about a girl who would refuse a man's proposal of marriage, then accept and wear his gifts, while contriving in subtle ways to keep him dangling in suspense. It is my opinion that the only emotion you rouse in this girl's breast is one of gratified vanity. I think you are wasting time and money in courting her, and making something of a fool of yourself into the bargain.

In discussing you with her friends she probably strikes a mildly derisive note, rather than one of appreciation and kindliness. One suspects she gets considerable ego satisfaction through having her little world know she has a man in the offing whose heart is hers for the taking. Since evidence indicates that she is a rather petty, vain and undependable creature, I would advise you to cut the courtship short, and, as you say, "take yourself by the back of the neck and force yourself into the society of other women."

• • • •

If, in spite of my analysis of her character, you are still determined to have her if possible, it may interest you to know that the best way to win a coquette is to treat her with cool indifference. If you are the only man in her life, and she is smitten with fear of losing you, she may decide to marry you, after all.

Local Shops Defended.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I rise to defend the Washington shops, so berated by "Customer" in your column of June 28. Like her, I have lived in Washington two years, and, like her, I have shopped in many other large cities, although none on the Pacific Coast. Unlike her, I am not an easy customer to fit, for my size is 38 or 40. Nevertheless, I have met courtesy and helpfulness in most of the Washington stores where I buy clothes, and there is one large department store in particular where my dealings have been extraordinarily harmonious and satisfactory.

• • • •

Of course, I do not "shop" unless I really intend to buy—provided I find something I like. When I shop, particularly for clothing, I have a very clear idea of the type of garment I want, the colors that will do, and the top price I am prepared to pay. I submit these details to the sales person immediately and inspect what she has to offer. Usually I don't enter a fitting room unless I see two or three garments I think will do, and with that number to choose from usually I am able to make a final selection.

• • • •

I can understand that a clerk's patience might be tried by a customer who doesn't know what she wants, and tries on dresses costing three times what she is prepared to pay, until she is dissatisfied with dresses in her price range. Even so, my daughter recently tried on shoes in a certain store for half an hour, and found nothing that felt comfortable. We bought nothing, yet the clerk's "I'm sorry we could find nothing to suit you," was as polite as her "Thank you" would have been had she made the sale. Recently, too, I looked at cigarette holders and found nothing for less than $1.50. I told the clerk I didn't wish to pay that much. She neither raised her brows nor eyed me in scorn, but responded courteously and put her stock away.

• • • •

The point I am trying to make is this: I believe in almost any store if the customer is courteous and considerate the clerk will be likewise; and most clerks will be courteous and considerate if the customer is not. The few cases of indifference I have encountered seemed to me to arise from lack of personality or background on the part of the sales person. Persons with such handicaps are to be found in every occupation. I find fewer of them, however, in department stores than I do in restaurants, bake shops, public libraries and government departments!

SATISFIED CUSTOMER.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Twenty-year-old girl who got her first job in the business world as secretary, six months ago, is distressed to point of nervous exhaustion by her married employer's lovemaking. He is 57 years old, has a large family, thrusts gifts upon her, tells of his "violent love" for her, and insists upon her saying that she loves him. She asks what to do, and says if anyone were to learn of the situation, she would "surely commit suicide." Her questions will be answered tomorrow. This column appears Sunday and daily.

Cottons Dance in Town

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 30.

ONE of New York's greatest open-air events—the out-of-door concert—is now prepared to run for the next two months at Lewisohn's Open Air Stadium of the College of the City of New York. These concerts for years have been underwritten by the aged philanthropist, August Heckscher. The first night opened with the sure-fire Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, with Albert Spalding as violin soloist. The night was perfect; the attendance capacity, which means 17,000 persons, including the spooners who sit in the 50-cent concrete stadium seats from which C. C. N. Y. students watch football games. In a dim light, high from the ground, these hand-holding, music-enthralled young folks fail to feel the hard, cold stony seats—for what better opiate is there than young-love-plus-music?

ALICE HUGHES.

This season the plan is to produce more opera and ballet than ever before, because these draw the biggest attendance. Wagner lovers will be able to renew their acquaintance with parts of the ring, under the able direction of Fritz Reiner. For the modern minded, "Lady Macbeth of Mtsenk," for which the able Russian composer Shostakovich lost his standing with the Soviet because his tragically beautiful music lacked Marxian ideology.

No city in the world is as musically pampered as New York, and this summer will prove no exception, according to the plans of Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheim, the stadium's chairwoman. The concerts are underwritten with a $75,000 guaranty, and it looks like a great season for Verdi, Brahms and Chopin, popular favorites, as well as for George Gershwin, whose modern symphonies have so outstripped the realm of jazz that his music merits program place along with the best.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A New York girl who dresses like a Californian—which she is originally—is Eleanor LeMaire, our famous interior architect. Probably the best one in the country, Eleanor always recalls Trilby to me. She is a big girl with masses of natural auburn hair, wide blue eyes and the pink-and-white coloring that go with that type of profligate beauty. She knows plenty about fashion, but has never been content to knuckle down to our hard-and-fast summer rule of black for the city. The other day at a Fashion Group lunch, Eleanor turned up in brilliant turquoise blue from top to toe, and stood out like a beacon among us oh! so correct New Yorkers.

Mary Dougherty, conceded to be this country's smartest woman's page editors, wears dark blue glasses in the office. They rest her eyes, she says. And she always wears a tie or a pin the exact shade of the specs. She says if a woman wears glasses, they are as much a part of her ensemble as her lipstick, which is always carefully harmonized or matched to a costume. She's right, and it's something women who wear glasses might think about.

Stylist Finds Older Women Best Subjects

Developed Personality Is Aid to Design, Saleem Points Out.

ARTISTS long have extolled the seasoned beauty of the older woman. But clothes designers seemingly have focused their thought and attention on the debutante. Now, however, comes Shaikh Saleem, costume and shoe designer of New York and Washington, to maintain that the mature woman is a better subject for clothes designing than the more youthful types.

"The personality the older woman has developed," says Mr. Saleem. "Her experience and wisdom give more depth to her soul and this is revealed in her face, particularly her eyes. This gives the designer more inspiration in creating a costume to fit her personality.

"Designing does not mean just making clothes, it means creating for the individual. A beautiful effect and well-fitted costume is not enough. It must fit the temperament and personality of the wearer; otherwise, it becomes a mere disguise. But suited to the individual, clothes have an indefinable charm which not only distinguish the wearer, but have a decided influence on all those who see them."

"Intellect" Needed.

Clothes make the woman if not the man, insists Mr. Saleem. "If well chosen, they dramatize her personality and silently acclaim her good taste and knowledge of herself," he said. "To choose clothes successfully a woman must have intellect as well as charm. She should strive to appear smart and distinctive rather than pretty."

In his own designing, Mr. Saleem says he unconsciously draws on his Arabian heritage, usually finding, when the garment is completed, that it "suggests the mysticism and romance of Arabia."

Americans owe their flare for smart fashions to the Arabic influence in Europe, due to the Arabic invasions, Mr. Saleem maintains. He says many of the greatest designers of today are returning to this old influence for line, color and even completed effects.

The importance of shoes in the costume is too frequently neglected in Mr. Saleem's belief. "American women need more courage in selecting shoes of unusual materials and individual styling," he said. "They are eager to select the newest materials for frocks, but when it comes to shoes, they are reluctant to accept anything but the same old prosaic leathers and fabrics."

The current vogue for toeless, backless shoes for both daytime and evening is rapidly becoming a stable shoe styling, according to this designer. He points out it is of Arabic inspiration.

For summer, Mr. Saleem is advocating the novelty shoe to accent the simple frock of white, black or pastel tints. For daytime, he suggests toeless and backless shoes of patterned linen, cotton and silk, piped in contrasting solid colors; for evening, shoes of lace over satin of a striking color contrast. Other featured styles are: the bicycle lacings, odd side fastenings, combing of leather and fabric, use of dramatic buckles. Among the movie stars for whom this designer has created costume and shoe fashions are Norma Shearer, Marlene Dietrich, Anna Sten, Hope Hampton, Joan Crawford and Mary Pickford.

TENT CITY NEWS

SCOUTS IN PICTURES

Similar in appearance, but totally different in significance, to scenes in foreign lands was this review yesterday of Canadian Scouts by their leaders.

A group of Scouts pauses to talk as an outgoing steamer gives the photographer a study in black and white.

The Chilean delegation crowds about a table to sweeten the morning air with the harmony of voices. Their music came with their fathers from Spain centuries ago.

Many Nations' Flags Decorate Scouts' Avenue

By Jack Parker—Troop 5.

Post Special Jamboree Reporter.

The Avenue of Flags is certainly picturesque, draped as it is with all the different colorful flags. Flags of foreign nations line the sides of the 500-foot driveway leading into the executive headquarters of camp. At the west end of the road the American flag is in the foremost place. On the peaks of the numerous tents lining the sides of the roadway are more American flags.

JACK PARKER.

The flagpoles, which hold the 52 foreign flags, are labeled with neat black and white signs designating the country of which the flag is the national emblem.

There are three outstanding hobbies seen at the Jamboree. One is "swaps," while the other two have to do with cameras and bikes. In "swaps," fellows bring articles typical of their locality to exchange with another fellow from another place, who also has a swap. Some of the best I have seen have been provided by the Scouts from West Virginia, Texas and Hollywood, Calif. The boys from the coal regions of West Virginia have brought briquets of coal from their territory. These briquets are shellacked and labeled, making attractive paperweights. The Texans have live horned toads to offer to any fellow who has something of interest to them. These toads will cling to one's shirt when placed there, and make nice pets. They are about 3 to 4 inches long. The Scouts from filmland have a novel swap, indeed. Twenty-foot strips of movie film are what they have to trade. I don't know how they got these, but they are popular.

Photography Popular.

The first of the other two hobbies is photography. Of course, the out-of-town fellows want pictures of our Washington, and every camper wants something by which to remember this once-in-a-lifetime experience. So cameras are seen clicking, snapping and shutting all day long. Once in a while someone is heard to utter a remark of disgust as some one walked in front of him just as he "got the Monument."

The last hobby is cycling. The out-of-town Scouts seem to enjoy riding around Potomac Park, and some close-by parts of town, learning our streets. They just about wear themselves out with all the strenuous exercise, but try and stop them! Occasionally a fellow is seen on horseback.

Campfire Lighted.

At 7:45 last night "Uncle" Dan Beard, national Scout commissioner, lit the Jamboree campfire with flint and steel. This fire will burn until the echo of the last bugle call of the Jamboree has died away. This fire is historic because never in the history of this country has such a conclave of youth gathered about a common fire.

Dr. James E. West officiated at the lighting of the fire, which was lit amid the steady beating of tom-toms and the dancing of Indian braves trained especially for this impressive ceremony.

The feature of the evening's program was President Roosevelt's speech to the Boy Scouts of America, but mainly to the 25,000 Scouts assembled. The President himself did not appear, however. His talk was read to us by Homer S. Cummings, Attorney General. A thunderous roar burst from the lips of the crowd at the finish of the President's speech.

Grandad of Turtles Is Captured by 6 Men

Seaside Heights, N. J., June 30 (U.P.).—Capt. Otto Peterson reported today that he had caught the grandfather of all turtles—a monster with a shell eight feet in diameter and standing three feet high on his bandy legs.

It took six men four hours to land the beast and twenty men to drag him into a pool at the Seaside Heights Casino. The turtle was estimated to weigh nearly a ton.

Five Scouts on Casualty List Recuperate, Miss First Events

Mumps, Appendicitis, Broken Arm and Poison Ivy Take Toll; Medical Staff Is Large and Watchful.

A case of mumps, two appendicitis operations, a broken arm and a severe attack of poison ivy are preventing five Scouts from enjoying the opening events of the Jamboree. It's not a heavy casualty list, however, considering the 25,000 lively boys who are living together in rather close quarters.

All five boys are recuperating at the Naval Hospital, probably feeling very lonely and sorry for themselves. But the Jamboree regulation is that any accident or illness requiring over 24 hours' treatment must be hospitalized.

The most recent arrival at the hospital is Joseph Law, of Nebraska, who broke his arm in a fall just as the Safety Division was assuring the reporter, "No accidents so far, thank Heaven!"

Billy Teal, of Kansas City, Mo., 14, one of the appendicitis victims, was stricken Monday on his way to Washington. He was rushed from the train to the hospital, where the offending appendix was removed.

The first Jamboree appendectomy was performed Saturday on Bradford Raley, of Lubbuck, Tex. Both boys are recovering satisfactorily.

The identity of the mumps and poison ivy victims has not been revealed. But Dr. William C. Smith, chief medical officer and a United States Public Health Service surgeon, explained both afflictions were contracted before the boys arrived at camp.

As a precaution against a mumps epidemic, boys who were exposed before the case was discovered are being examined daily by doctors from the District Health Office.

Dr. Smith's corps of assistants includes 160 men. There are three doctors in charge of the first-aid stations in each of the 20 sections of the camp, a corps of orderlies to assist them and several male nurses.

In addition to the Jamboree medical staff, a number of Army, Navy and District doctors were called in for the first few days to assist in physical examinations which each camper must undergo before being admitted.

William E. Lawrence, assistant national director of health and safety for the Boy Scouts, is chief safety inspector at the Jamboree. His job is to keep 25,000 boys safe in the camp, on the streets, in swimming pools, on bicycles and buses, in boats and in canoes.

Head of the entire Health and Safety Division is Capt. Fred C. Mills. Among his other assistants are Chief Sanitary Inspector Charles T. Wright, 26 sanitary inspectors, 6 safety inspectors, and 6 firemen with 2 fire-trucks and an ambulance.

Edison Receives Argentine Cadets Visiting Capital

Accompanied by Argentine Ambassador Filipe A. Espil, the future South American naval officers also called on Admiral William D. Leahy and Secretary of War Woodring.

The cadets will visit Quantico, Va., and be the guests of Edison at luncheon today. Later in the day a receptoin will be held at the Argentine Embassy.

On Saturday they will place wreaths on tombs of George Washington and the Unknown Soldier, and on the statue of the Argentine hero, Gen. San Martin.

Police Catch Owl Who Fought Dog, Kittens and Jays

Several kittens and a dog were rescued yesterday from a screech owl by the Takoma, Md., police at 14 Sherman avenue, Takoma Park. Mrs. H. F. Ambrosi telephoned the police that the owl was cornering her kittens and a neighbor's dog in the back of her garage. The owl, in turn, was frightened by blue jays, who swooped down at his head.

Policeman Frank Lane captured the owl and brought him to the police station, where Harry Ourand, special town officer adopted the bird as a pet. Ourand said he'd surprise his wife who was very fond of owls. He named his new pet Frankie after his captor.

Scout Leaders Hold Jamboree 'Great Stuff'

'Big Four' Headed by 'Uncle Dan' Here for Show.

The "big four" of the Boy Scouts of America—President Walter W. Head, Vice President Theodore Roosevelt, Chief Executive James E. West and "Uncle Dan" Beard—agreed last night that this Jamboree is great stuff.

Cornered together in the mess tent west of the monument as they worked over their roast lamb and green beans, the quartet were unstinting in their praise of those who have made possible the first national encampment of its kind.

"Grand, perfectly grand," volunteered Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt, even though he is at odds, politically, with the man who invited the boys to Washington—President Roosevelt, his distant cousin.

"A great party," said President Head, a St. Louisan who a short time previously had come back from the ball game at Griffith Stadium, where he "chaperoned" thousands of scouts who were guests of Clark Griffith.

Dr. West echoed Head's comment and "Uncle Dan," well, he said he thought better preparations for the Jamboree could not have been made.

Eighty-seven years old last June 21 but still the youngest scout on the reservation, in the matter of spirit, "Uncle Dan" confided that he is having the time of his life. He spent a great part of the dinner meal swapping reminiscences with Col. Roosevelt.

"Remember the time," he asked the colonel, "when I was visiting you at Oyster Bay and word came in that Lindbergh had reached Paris? Time flies, huh?"

Roosevelt, bitter foe of the New Deal, was anxious to talk politics but he prefaced every remark with the warning, "Now remember, this is off the record." So what he had to say about the Supreme Court, the effect of bumper crops in Minnesota on the national political situation and other developments can't be repeated.

"Uncle Dan" said he has been named as a delegate to the World Jamboree in Holland later this month, but fears he won't be able to attend.

Forist Group Officers.

The Washington unit of the Florist Telegraph Delivery Association Tuesday elected George Roberts, District representative; Linden Skenk, chairman; Mrs. Charles Burton, vice chairman, and Mrs. J. Dan Blackistone, treasurer.

3 Scout Officials Take Plane Flight Over Camp Site

Three high-ranking officials of the Boy Scout Jamboree, who had seen quite a bit of the camp ground, got a new slant on things yesterday afternoon when they took an airplane flight over Washington.

In the plane were Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive; H. F. Gillette, national commodore of Sea Scouts, and Sheldon Clark, Chicago Sea Scout commodore. They were accompanied by Capt. "Eddie" Rickenbacker, America's ranking war ace, now general manager of Eastern Airlines; S. J. Solomon, head of the Washington Airport, and half a dozen newspaper reporters and photographers.

Viewed from the huge cabin plane, the tents spread out over Potomac Park, Hains Point and Columbia Island resembled neat patches of freckles sprinkled on the green grass.

Water Carnival Scheduled Tonight

A water carnival, featuring a canoe-tilting contest, water polo, fancy diving and swimming races will be held at the East Potomac Park swimming pool tonight at 8. Sponsored by the D. C. Congress Parent-Teacher Association, the affair will benefit the summer camp fund of the Council of Social Agencies.

A team of New York Boy Scouts, in Washington for the Jamboree, will give a demonstration of rescue and safety work. Teams from the Washington Canoe Club and the Ambassador Health Club will take part in a water polo match. Participants in the canoe-tilting contest will be Bill Havens, National A. A. U. tilting champion, and Alden Snell, Middle Atlantic champion.

Among the novelty events will be a bathing beauty contest for men, to be judged by girls. Joan Trainer, aged 9, will demonstrate lifesaving methods by rescuing an adult.

Nation Needs Them, Lodge Tells Scouts

What this Government and country needs is the "vigorous, red-blooded, hard-hitting type of Americanism which you represent," Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, yesterday told the Boston Council of Boy Scouts attending the Scout Jamboree here.

Senator Lodge, who is a member of the Executive Council of the North Shore Boy Scouts, visited all the Massachusetts Scout troop camps.

25,000 Scouts Open Jamboree Amid Shower

Hear Roosevelt Greeting Read by Attorney General Cummings.

Chocolate Soldier," the chorus of voices could be heard on the Virginia side of the Potomac, according to one policeman. And when Oscar Kirkham, director of morale, led a cheer to Dr. West, the Monument itself seemed to tremble before the vocal assault.

Col. Roosevelt, vice president of the B. S. A., thrilled the "little army" with tales of his father, the late President, "who told us what was what."

"Let me pass on to you the maxim that father handed down to us," he said. "It is 'Don't flinch, don't foul, and hit the line hard.'"

That brought a wave of cheering.

Short talks also were delivered by Walter W. Head, national president of the movement; Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman of the President's Jamboree Committee, and Dr. West.

In his message, read by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who missed the duPont-Reosevelt wedding to attend the campfire program, the President predicted the Scouts will become better citizens for having attended the Jamboree.

"Yours will be a memorable encampment," he said, "and I know you will draw inspiration from the environment and associations that will be yours during your stay in the city. The impressions which you will carry back to your homes will, I hope, be a permanent influence in your lives, for sooner than we who are older realize, you will assume the full responsibilities of citizenship."

The United States today has thousands of men who are better citizens because they were Scouts in their youth, the honorary head of the B. S. A. declared.

"Honor, honesty, straightforward dealing and a spirit of helpfulness toward others are ideals for men and there is a better prospect that we shall find these characteristics in the men of the future if they are inculcated in boyhood through membership in the Boy Scouts.

"With these thoughts in my mind, I bid all Scouts a welcome to Washington. I trust that your sojourn will be a pleasant one and that as a result of your rich and varied experiences here at the seat of Government you will be better Scouts and more stalwart citizens in the years to come."

The sounding of taps by three boys of the Racine (Wis.) Drum and Bugle Corps, blowing their instruments over the scout reservation from the top of Washington Monument, closed the campfire program.

Raising of the colors over the 350-acre Jamboree camp yesterday morning was the first official event on the crowded 10-day calendar. A bomb signal called every scout to attention before the tents. A second blast from the trench mortar located at the base of the monument was the cue for the flags of 52 foreign countries to be sent aloft in the "Avenue of Flags" west of the Washington shaft. Then, with the third bomb, more than 1,600 American and Scout flags were hoisted over the 20-section headquarters and 780 troop camping areas.

President Head thereupon pronounced the Jamboree officially opened.

The third bomb carried aloft a large American flag, which floated to earth by parachute. It was recovered by a proud scout from the topmost branches of a tree near the monument.

The ceremonies were carried out to music by troop bands, scattered throughout the encampment, and a 66-piece band at headquarters composed of boys from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and the District.

"Uncle Dan" Beard, one of the founders of the Boy Scouts of America 27 years ago and now National Scout Commissioner, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon. Because he is not as young as he used to be—"Uncle Dan" celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday ten days ago—he took a suite at the Hotel Mayflower instead of joining his young disciples in their rough and rustic tent colonies along the Potomac.

Yesterday's opening events were primarily for the boys themselves. Today the public, which has manifested intense interest in the Jamboree by sightseeing on the huge encampment, will obtain its first official view of scout activities. This will be the opening performance of "Cavalcade of Scouting," a spectacle which will be staged six nights on the Monument Grounds arena.

4,000 in "Cavalcade."

Four thousand boys from Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee and the District of Columbia will take part in the opening show, which is scheduled for 8 p. m. Representatives of other States will perform on succeeding nights, so that no two shows will be the same.

A 100-piece band will open tonight's festivities. Its stirring music will introduce Pete McLaren, world's champion woodchopper, 100 Boy Scout "Indians" in a special dancing act, a flag signaling demonstration and scores of other features.

Scouts will build fires by striking flint against steel. They will march around 1,000 of them, with sparklers symbolizing the spirit of scouting and the "burning flame of young manhood." They will rescue make believe victims of a mine explosion and in the grand finale, build a number of lookout towers, bridges, derricks and other structures without nails.

Admission to all performances—Friday, Saturday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday—will be by tickets which are on sale downtown and at the office on Constitution avenue near Seventeenth street. Reservations may be made in advance by telephoning Metropolitan 2612.

Other events on today's calendar are excursions to Mount Vernon and scout demonstrations in the four camp theaters on the reservations to which the public is invited.

Visitor's Car Stolen While Inspecting Sights

Mrs. Rose Domico Zeccheo, a visitor from Cleveland, Ohio, came down from the Washington Monument yesterday to find her car and all her luggage stolen.

While police searched for the car last night, Mrs. Zeccheo and her companions stayed at the Potomac Park tourist camp until they received money from Cleveland to return home.

Baden-Powell Hails Scouts as Army of Peace

Jamboree Members Reminded They Are Brothers in One Great Family.

Lord Baden-Powell, acclaimed Chief Scout of the world at the first international Jamboree in England in 1920, yesterday hailed the movement as "a great army for peace" in a cablegram to the Washington encampment.

The aged Scout leader, who visted Washington in 1935 with Lady Baden-Powell, reminded the 25,000 American Scouts and their 400 guests from 24 foreign lands they are all "brothers in one great family of Scouts."

This greeting, from his home at Pax Hill, Bentley, Hampshire, England, stated:

"I want to welcome all the Scouts who from so many different countries are coming together to meet each other in Washington.

"First, let me thank the Boy Scouts of America for acting as hosts on this great occasion, and for all the work they have undertaken in the way of organizing and administering these large numbers.

"Secondly, I am delighted that the Scouts of so many other countries have responded to the invitation and have come together to make each others' acquaintance. My hope is that you will al' make that acquaintance something more than mere acquaintance. Make friendships with each other.

"You will see that fellows from other countries have ways and tastes different from your own. Well, you must overlook such differences and see only where you are alike and develop your comradeship on these points which interest both of you.

Busy Jamboree Switchboard Hums With Calls, 1,000 Hourly, As Anxious Parents, Friends of Scouts Tax Complex System

Columbia Island Receives First Telephone in Its History.

"Jamboree! . . . I'll connect you with information . . . Sorry, that line's busy . . . Waiting? . . . Jamboree!"

A constant hum of such phrases is heard every hour of the day and night at the switchboard of the Boy Scout Jamboree. There three operators, who fortunately for their sanity, are not equipped with single-track minds, sit and supervise with flying fingers a complicated network of gray, green and red cords.

Between 900 and 1,000 calls are handled hourly, Mrs. Jewell Schorr, the chief operator, estimated. In addition to incoming and outgoing local calls, a large number of long distances testifies to the anxiety of parents for their wandering boys.

Texas is the most distant point heard from as yet. Oshkosh, Wis., appears several times on Mrs. Schorr's records. Other parents have called from Kansas City, Mo.; Birmingham, Ala.; Warren, Ohio; Muskogee, Okla., and Lexington, Ky.

The staff of six operators works in eight-hour shifts, beginning at 5 a. m. A supervisor from the telephone company is usually on hand too, helping the girls untie knots in the cords, plugging in and out for them when all their hands are busy and helping to solve the other problems which are bound to arise in such a complex organization.

Upon these young women has fallen the responsibility of keeping 25,000 Scouts in touch with home. Six operators in shifts of three each handle the Jamboree switchboard.

Calls are transferred from the switchboard to 140 main "stations" and 50 extensions. Outgoing calls are cleared on 20 trunk lines to the District central exchange.

Thanks to the Boy Scouts, the first telephone in history has been installed on Columbia Island. Thousands of feet of cable were used to connect the island with the mainland, in addition to the yards of insulated wire leading from the cables to the telephones.

Besides the telephones connected with the switchboard, there are two other ways of calling outside. Visitors to the Jamboree grounds may use pay stations, and the newspapers and broadcasting systems have been given "tie-lines" direct to their headquarters. A "tie-line" also has been established to the fire marshal's office as a safety precaution.

In Summer, especially, wise mothers are on their guard against cheaply made ice creams. You know Breyers is made with real cream, pure sugar and natural flavors. That is guaranteed by the famous Breyers Pledge of Purity.

Bob Burns Says

I kinda agree with them psychologists fellas who say that your children will think more of you and love you more if you teach 'em to be industrious by makin' 'em earn their way early in life. I only saw one exception to this rule and that was my Uncle Hod and his boy, Horace.

Uncle Hod had worked hard to build up a business back home, but all Horace would do was to lay around the pool hall all week and go to the dances on Saturday night. Finally on Horace's forty-third birthday, Uncle Hod called him in and says, "Son, I'm 86 years old and I have saved enough for me to live on, so I'm gonna turn my business over to you and retire."

Horace said, "Dad I love you too much to take your business from you—you just keep on livin' a few more years and we'll retire together."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Members of the Library of Congress Lodge, which Tuesday night withdrew from the A. F. G. E. and the A. F. of L.—asking the dissolution of its charter—have called a meeting for 5 o'clock this afternoon to seek admission to the United Federal Workers of America, the newly formed C. I. O. Government personnel organization.

William Rickel, of the library staff, will be chairman of the meeting, to be held at 135 B street southeast. Jacob Baker, provisional president of the U. F. W. A., has been invited to speak. Rickel is a member of the N. F. F. E. lodge in the Library of Congress and reports that two N. F. F. E. lodge members and two members of the now defunct A. F. G. E. lodge are on the committeee arranging for the meeting this afternoon.

The dissolved A. F. G. E. lodge was one of the earliest and most active ones in the formation of the parent organization. Its membership was listed at 63. The N. F. F. E. group in the library is said to be growing and to have frustrated a recent attempt by a group of liberals to swing it toward the C. I. O.

And now a word about an organization that is not affiliated with the C. I. O., the A. F. of L. or any other labor group, and which shows no inclination for such. This is the Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes. They meet at 8 o'clock this evening in the Bamboo Room of the Willard Hotel to hear Representative Dewey W. Johnson, of Minnesota, discuss "Organization for Sound Legislation."

"It is important that all non-classified Federal employes join this organization in order that they may work collectively for the passage of legislation giving them a civil service status, which can be accomplished, it is hoped, at this session of Congress," the announcement from President T. C. Ramsey states.

Medal Winners.

The Gregg gold and enamel medal has been awarded to eight students of the graduate school of the Department of Agriculture for taking in shorthand 175 words a minute for five minutes of even dictation. These are the first awards to be made in the graduate school for this speed, a test that comparatively few students pass. The students meriting the award are:

Dorothy L. Dockterman, Helen L. Evans, Ethelgoldie Freedman, Alma A. Gillespie, Harold A. Hubbell, Irene I. Kimble, Naomi Nekolaw and Anna May Pickering.

The speed of the graduate classes previously ranged from 100 to 130 words a minute, but during the past year Miss Clara R. Richter, instructor in technical speed writing, extended the course to include a second semester with a range of from 130 to 175 words a minute.

Goodbys.

Four employes, one with 36 years of services to his credit, were retired yesterday from the Department of Agriculture. They are Harry E. Moran, accountant and auditor, Bureau of Animal Industry, 36 years 10 months of service; Max B. Baldenburg, junior auditor, Bureau of Forest Service, 35 years 10 months of service; Charles L. Brown, senior highway engineer, Bureau of Public Roads, 19 years 11 months of service, and Willliam D. Dixon, skilled laborer, Bureau of Plant Industry, 32 years 1 month of service.

Robinson Bill Opposed.

Abolition of the Civil Service Commission, as proposed in the executive reorganizatoin bill of Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, now before the Senate, was condemned last night by the United Civil Service Employes in session at the office of E. Claude Babcock, the president.

The associatoin emphasized especially, according to Babcock, its belief that it is desirable that the commission form of agency be retained insofar as a selection of eligibles and their assignment to positions are concerned.

While the association agreed with the President's organization committee, headed by Louis E. Brownlow, that the single administrator proposed in the bill could handle administrative matters more efficiently than they are at present handled, nevertheless, they compared conduct of examinations and choice among candidates to "American system of government trial by jury."

Child Welfare Laws Cheer D.C. Agencies

Passage of 3 Important Acts This Summer Is Forecast.

Washington ranks third among 31 American cities of comparable size in the number of children dependent on its care. Why this condition persists and what is being done about it is discussed in the following article, the first in a series.

By Christine Sadler.

After more than a decade of "study and exhortation," Washington welfare workers and club women were jubilant yesterday over prospects that before this summer is ended the District will have a new juvenile court bill, a new adoption law, and a revised public welfare law.

Rumor that the juvenile court bill will get through Congress this week has telephones ringing throughout the city. The bill will bring into effect a law to replace one passed in 1906 and will change the court from a criminal tribunal to a court of chancery, designed to deal with young delinquents as nearly as possible in the spirit of a wise parent toward an erring child. It was sponsored by the League of Women Voters and has the backing of more than 70 welfare agencies.

"We also have hopes for the adoption law, which is already before Congress, and for the revised public welfare law, the draft for which has reached the corporation counsel's office," said Mrs. Ernest Gruening, chairman of the child committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

New Era for Children.

"It appears that 1937 will go down in history as the year in which Washington's archaic dependency and delinquency laws were thrown away and a new era dawned for the District's children," declared Miss A. Patricia Morss, head of the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare.

Although the welfare leaders do not know how the programs will come out financially in the new tax setup, they are not worrying.

"If the new tax will brings in additional revenue, I feel sure some of it will go to child welfare. The commissioners are interested. The court bill and the revised public welfare bill will give us the legal basis for the reforms necessary, and that is what we need," Miss Morss said.

Starting out last fall with a five-point program, the agencies which have been most interested have decided to concentrate all efforts behind the three bills which they consider most vital and which they feel now will be enacted before the year is over.

Plans to push for a new birth registration law and for a new illegitimacy law have been dropped for the time being, as their provisions will have to be worked out in co-operation with the Department of Health and it was decided not to "spread our energies." They remain on the calendar for next year, however.

Survey Helps Cause.

Welfare leaders believe their cause has been helped considerably by the study of public child welfare in the District made by Emma O. Lundberg and released this week by the Children's Bureau. This study brings together the findings of agencies concerning outmoded laws and inadequate funds, and turns the spotlight on the fact that Washington ranks third among the 31 American cities of comparable population in the number of children dependent on the city's care.

This high percentage of dependency is fostered by legal provisions to the effect that children must be committed to the board of public welfare by court order before aid can be extended them. In other words, the District laws encourage dependency because they make help in the home impossible.

For instance, a father making $18 to $25 a week and left with six children could hardly be expected to keep his family together under present laws—unless one of the children was old enough to assume part of the housekeeping responsibility. A housekeeper willing to look after six children would have to be paid at least $10 in Washington, Miss Morss said. However much welfare workers might think he needed financial aid, he could not be aided—unless he was willing to give up his job and become a relief client.

The children can be taken as wards of the District, however, and in this transaction the District will spend more money than would have been necessary to keep the home together.

Nearby Camps Assure Fresh Air, Sunshine and Play For Hundreds of Capital's Underprivileged Children

Mothers Recieve Chance Also for Healthful Recreation.

Now that July's here, Washington groups and agencies interested in the welfare of underprivileged children and their mothers have declared for fresh air and sunshine, balanced meals and recreation.

With every agency expanding its program, more individuals interested than ever before, and the National Park Service pitching in with a 19,000-acre recreational park development at Chopawamsic, Va., it appears that eventually there will be a free vacation for every boy and girl in the District.

Typifying the work being done and the type of camp leadership being developed is the program of the Family Service Association, which yesterday sent 95 boys and girls between 7 and 12 years to Camp Good Will, and the day before sent 96 colored children to Camp Pleasant—both in the Chopawamsick area.

More than 800 mothers and children up to 12 will be given two-week vacations at these camps before the summer is ended. They will be selected from the neediest families served by 26 Washington social agencies. When health is a factor—as it often is—the vacation period will be extended.

The third camp operating at Chopawamsic this summer will be that sponsored by the Jewish Community Center, which this afternoon will send approximately 100 children into the area.

The Boys' Club camp will be opened at Scotland, Md., next Saturday and during the summer will give vacations to more than 700 boys. This is twice the number the club was able to care for last season, but the fact that it has more than 7,500 boys enrolled indicates the scope of work yet to be done among the city's underprivileged children.

The free camp operated at Woodland Beach by the Good Samaritans also is being opened Saturday. Girls from 6 to 14 years will be given vacations for the first two weeks. Boys of the same age group will enjoy the second period. The groups will alternate until the camp closes on August 31. A program of swimming, sports and movies is provided.

At Chopawamsic the Family Service Association will operate model camps that demonstrate the most up-to-date ideas in camping procedure. Charles B. Cranford, whose work in Westchester County, N. Y., has been widely commended, will serve the camps in an advisory capacity—visiting them each week.

A comprehensive guidance program under the direction of Josephine Brown has been inaugurated. In this program, children with pre-delinquent tendencies will be guided into the right attitudes and habits. Effort will be made to take all personality differences into consideration and to open up new avenues of interests and abilities.

A record of these procedures will be presented to the social agencies and to the children's school teachers in the fall. William H. Savin, director of the association, has long believed that good camping should fit into the child's regular educational program.

"A camp period, in my opinion, should be more than just a few days in the open. Unless we can make it such that it contributes to the child's future health, emotional, community and educational development, we are not doing all that can be done," he said.

Camp Good Will and Camp Pleasant have been in operation in Washington since 1906 and 1908, respectively. This is their first summer outside the District. They were the first local camps to take mothers.

They are so operated that mothers attend the camps in company with their small children, which are cared for during the day in the camp nurseries. The larger children are in separate camp units, although there are joint dining room facilities.

No mothers accompanied the children to Camp Good Will yesterday, however, for the camp buildings are not yet entirely finished and the first contingent is made up of "pioneers" who will watch CCC and WPA workers put on the last roofs and complete work on the large swimming pool.

All camp houses in the Chopawamsic area are made of logs and are artistically designed by the National Park Service—to meet all family camp requirements.

In a region of hills, creeks, tall trees, laurel and wild flowers, the camps are ideally situated for nature study and hiking.

During the summer several "open-camp" days will be observed, when District visitors will be welcomed and special programs given.

Each child attending the camps are examined twice, first a week before his camp period begins and next on the day he leaves for the area.

The United States Public Health Service and the Virginia Public Health Service are making arrangements for regular camp inspections.

The major problem confronting the association and its new camps at present is one of transportation. In years previous, civic clubs have supplied private cars for this purpose; but with the new locations 32 miles away, the problem becomes a big one.

Groups will be leaving Washington every two weeks on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, the next "moving" being on July 13 and 14.

Woman Dies, Traffic Toll Raised to 55

Succumbs in Hospital to Injuries Suffered in Auto Crash.

The District traffic fatality total was raised to 55 with the death early yesterday of a colored woman, who succumbed in Freedmen's Hospital to injuries suffered May 14.

The woman, Ellen Coleman, 34, of 1024 Eleventh street northwest, was struck by an automobile which ran onto the sidewalk at Eleventh and R streets northwest after a collision with another machine.

Vast Flag Procession Planned For July 4 Water Gate Rites

300 or More Military, Patriotic and Veterans' Organizations to Take Part; Scouts to Form Guard, Carry Torches.

Plans for a vast procession of flags to top the Fourth of July celebration at the Water Gate of Arlington Memorial Bridge—a procession that would embrace 300 or more units of military, patriotic and veterans' organizations—were prepared yesterday as Washington focused attention on the annual patriotic holiday.

The procession will follow a program by the United States Marine Band, beginning at 7:15 Monday evening. Color guards from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard will lead the processional.

Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, will deliver the address. Representative James P. McGranery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, will read the Declaration of Independence. The Rev. H. W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church, will deliver the invocation. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will introduce the speakers.

Local Boy Scouts will figure in the ceremonies. Thirteen of these will form a guard of honor at the speakers' platform, and 150 will present a torchlight march on Arlington Memorial Bridge at the conclusion of the program and immediately preceding the fireworks.

Members of the citizens' committee met yesterday to prepare arrangements. Col. John W. Oehmann and Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, of the District of Columbia National Guard, assisted by officers of the staff, will have charge of the procession of flags. The National Guard will furnish a detail of guardsmen as guards and ushers.

District Man Held In Counterfeit Case

Gimler J. Foster, 23, was held for investigation at the First Precinct Police Station last night in connection with the passage of a counterfeit $5 bill. He told police he lived in the 1300 block of Clifton street northwest.

The bill was passed at a gas station, Eleventh and T streets.

W. R. Allen, secret service agent, questioned Foster for two hours. Foster said he had obtained the bill during the course of purchases made during the morning, but he did not know where. A companion of Foster was released after questioning.

T. H. White Dies Of Heart Trouble

Thomas H. White, a bookbinder at the Government Printing Office, died of a heart attack early yesterday while at work. His body was removed to his residence, 1211 North Capitol street. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

Surviving is his son, N. T. White, of Baltimore, who was arranging for funeral services last night.

Charles Carol Sinclair Dies in D. C. Hospital

Charles Carol Sinclair, 52, of 731 Second street northeast, died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital after a week's illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Addie May Sinclair, and a brother, Robert Sinclair, both of Washington.

The funeral will be from the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast, Saturday

Scout Here Injured In Grandstand Fall

Scouts Broadcast Over Own Station

Short wave radio, as well as the presence of 400 Boy Scouts from 25 foreign countries, gave an international aspect to the opening campfire program of the Jamboree last night.

The ceremonies, besides being broadcast from coast to coast, were carried by short wave to Europe, Hawaii and South America over N. B. C. networks.

Jamboree Scouts, incidentally, have their own short wave broadcasting station with the call letters "W-3-USA." It operates on 80 meters and ultra-high frequencies, has an unlimited range and utilizes one kilowatt of power, which is more power than is used by many commercial senders.

Farmer Unions Call Conclave, May Join C.I.O.

Lewis Group Favored in Summons to Vote on Affiliation.

Extension of activities of the Committee for Industrial Organization into the vast new field of agricultural workers, a field regarded as having potential political possibilities, was indicated here yesterday.

The Southern Tenant Farmers Union announced a call to a national convention at Denver on July 9 of all agricultural, cannery and packing-house unions for the twin purposes of forming an international union and deciding on affiliation with the C. I. O. or the rival American Federation of Labor.

Copies of the convention call, distributed here and in Denver simultaneously by the national committee of agricultural cannery and packing-house unions, left little doubt of the choice leaders of the convention prefer.

Craft Policy Disparaged.

"The successful policies of the Committee on (sic) Industrial Organization," said the committee, "in successfully organizing the millions of unorganized in steel, auto, rubber, textile, radio, etc., on the basis of industrial unionism makes it necessary for us to decide this question.

"In agriculture, we can not organize along craft lines of separate unions for each type of work. We must clearly build a union including all workers in agricultural and related fields such as canneries, packing houses, etc.

"The policy of the C. I. O. in successfully organizing in industry-wide unions and their policy of aggressively assisting the organization of the unorganized with advice, funds and organizers makes it necessary for us to seriously consider affiliation to the C. I. O."

44 Now A. F. of L. Unions.

The convention call asserted 100 unions now exist which will be embraced in the proposed new organization. The membership was said to be between 75,000 and 100,000, to cover 23 States and to pay $3,500 monthly in dues to the A. F. of L. The call was signed by 54 unions, 44 of them affiliates of the A. F. of L., it was said.

Political implications of this convention, so far as the C. I. O. is concerned, were emphasized by an editorial last week in an official C. I. O. publication stressing the political importance of organiaztion of Federal Government workers.

Affiliation of farm workers with the C. I. O. might be the spearhead, observers agreed, of another effort, this time using the John L. Lewis organization as a vehicle, toward a farmer-labor party, long unrealized dream of American left-wing politicians.

Announcement of the convention call was made here by Gardner Jackson, representative of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, who emphasized that the convention aims at organization of farm, packing house and cannery workers "in areas where labor is in fairly concentrated quantities, areas where absentee ownership, the corporate set-up and large scale operation are prominent."

Two Concerts Canceled.

Because of the Boy Scout Jamboree the concerts scheduled to be played by the United States Marine Band on today and Thursday, July 8, at the District of Columbia World War Memorial have been canceled, the Marine Corps announced last night.

O'Neill, Freshman in House, Named to District Committee

N. J. Representative Gets Vacancy Left by Mrs. Norton.

The House District Committee yesterday got a new member from New Jersey in exchange for its former chairman, Representative Mary T. Norton, who now heads the Labor Committee.

Upon motion of the Ways and Means Committee, Representative Edward Leo O'Neill (Democrat), of Newark, was elected a member of the committee by the House.

A freshman in the House, O'Neill is one of the youngest looking members, although not the youngest in years. He will be 34 in July.

An ardent admirer of Mrs. Norton, O'Neill accepted the appointment upon her recommendation.

"She told me it would be hard work, but good experience," he said. Then he added: "You may quote me as saying she's a swell guy."

O'Neill said he has no particular ideas to try out in the District, but hopes to be of service to the residents of voteless Washington.

Before being elected to Congress he had no previous political experience, other than to run unsuccessfully in 1934 and 1936 for the job he now holds. Prior to that time he was associated with the Armour Meat Packing Co. in Newark, and later he was an official in the Federal Housing Administration there.

REP. EDWARD O'NEILL.

"But I don't know a thing about abattoirs," he added.

Modestly, he lists only his name in the Congressional Directory.

"That's all there is to say," he explained.

Leahy Regrets Calling Soviet Citizens Slaves

Apology by Admiral Is Conveyed to Russia by Hull.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull announced yesterday he had conveyed to the Soviet government an apology by Admiral William D. Leahy for referring recently to the Russian people as "virtually slaves of the central organization."

The State Department disclosed that the Soviet embassy made informal representations against Leahy's remarks contained in an address prepared for delivery to the Army Industrial College on June 22.

Letter of Regret.

Leahy, chief of naval operations, responded to a State Department inquiry concerning the incident with a letter in which he was said to have expressed his "sincere regret" that his words were taken as a reflection on the Russian people or the Soviet government.

Secretary Hull told his press conference Admiral Leahy asserted it was not his intention to use any language calculated to offend that country.

The State Department in turn transmitted Leahy's letter to the Soviet embassy as an answer to its representations.

The matter was called to the attention of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles by Constantine Umansky, counselor of the Soviet embassy, two days after accounts of Leahy's address were published.

State Department officials asserted that Umansky's action did not involve a "formal protest."

Leahy, in his address, described industrial preparedness steps taken by foreign governments, and added, according to official text of his remarks:

"Russia has carried the regimentation of national forces even further, controlling not only the output of industry, but also the daily life of her people to such an extent that they appear to be virtually slaves of the central organization."

Md. Bass Season Will Open Today; Waters Are Muddy

Hagerstown, June 30.—The bass fishing season opens tomorrow, but anglers will have to await clearing waters of the Potomac River and its tributaries before they can go fishing. A heavy rain Sunday caused the river to rise and mudded the water.

Local sportsmen had advocated an earlier opening of the bass fishing season, contending that rains during the latter part of June and July kept the Potomac muddy. A bill was passed providing for the opening of the bass fishing season June 15 in Washington County, but the measure was vetoed by Gov. Harry Nice following opposition by the State Conservation Commission.

Fishermen are looking forward to the best bass season in years, pointing to the fact that 350,000 fingerlings and adult bass have been placed in the Potomac and other bass fishing streams during the last year by the Conservation Commission. Forty thousand additional small-mouth bass are being held at the Lewiston hatchery until they attain a length of 3 inches before being liberated in streams of Western Maryland.

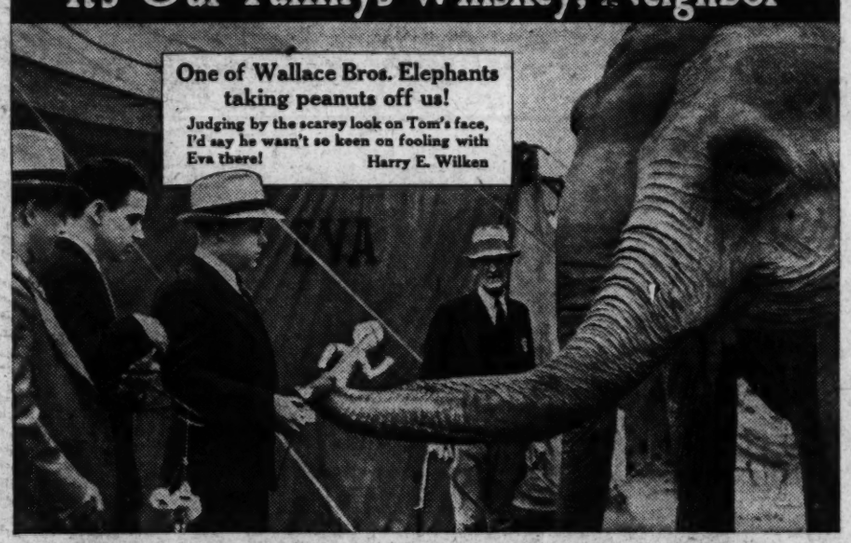
It's Our Family's Whiskey, Neighbor



One of Wallace Bros. Elephants taking peanuts off us!
Judging by the scarey look on Tom's face, I'd say he wasn't so keen on fooling with Eva there!
Harry E. Wilken

I bet Our Family was making whiskey before Eva was born!

—and this is our own Family's Recipe

Those elephants eating peanuts there mightn't be over thirty or forty years old for all I know. Or like as not they'd be a hundred years or so.

I'll bet people living to be as old as elephants would know a whole lot! But the next best thing is to learn from the folks that have gone before you—and that's what we've tried to do in our Family—learn from Pa Wilken all he picked up in his 40 odd years of distilling, just as he learned from Grandpa Wilken what he knew about making fine whiskey. And this personal Family's Recipe of ours has got everything all of us learned concerning making whiskey mild and tasty. Yes sir—everything!

Dr. Silver declared that glare from automobile headlights are a major factor in motor fatalities, and emphasized that 52 per cent of fatal pedestrian accidents and 31 per cent of non-pedestrian accidents occur after dark.

government-held island, remained in sight.

Foreign Minister Giral declared "Italian soldiers are still arriving in Spain," repeating charges denied yesterday by the Italian authorities in London.

"There has not been a fortnight since last August that Italian soldiers have not arrived. Various means of camouflage are used—many are landed in Morocco and then sent to Spain," he said.

Germany has at least four submarines in the Mediterranean, said the minister.

Italian "Volunteers" to Stay.

Rome (Thursday), July 1 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, declared editorially today Italy will not withdraw her volunteers from the Spanish civil war and bluntly accused France and Great Britain of violating the European nonintervention agreement.

The style of the editorial led diplomatic sources to believe Il Duce himself was the author.

The article asserted that "the Reds (Spanish government) were first to give the Spanish civil war the character of a European war" and charged that "50,000 foreign volunteers from every part of Europe had arrived in Spain from France by the second half of 1936."

Not until the end of 1936 did Fascist volunteers begin to depart for Spain, the editorial continued.

Italy, Il Popolo said, "fruitlessly respected the nonintervention agreement," since it became effective last fall. On the other hand, it charged, the accord "never has been respected by France" and "English nonintervention is a fable in which only imbeciles can believe."

Relief Steps Rushed.

Madrid, June 30 (AP).—The steady insurgent drive from Bilbao toward Santander today spurred the Madrid-Valencia government to push measures for aid to the stricken northern provinces.

Franco Pogroms Attacked.

The Spanish Embassy yesterday assailed the regime of the rebel generalissimo, Franco, for fostering what it termed a "reign of terror against Jews and Free Masons."

"The persecuition of Jews which has marked the course of Hitler's Third Reich and more recently has made its appearance in Italy also is being promoted in those sections of Spain held by former Gen. Francisco Franco's Fascist forces," an embassy statement charged.

Italian Gun Crew at Practice

Italy and Germany, both withdrawing from the neutral patrol of Spanish waters, indicated a closer understanding with Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco. Here's an Italian gun crew at practice on the Mediterranean. Europe was getting another war scare.

Fight for Custody Of Children Opens

The troubles of the Murrays went into a second chapter in District Court late yesterday when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, before whom a limited divorce case was being tried, adjourned court when Raymond C. Murray, cab driver, asked time to bring his witnesses into court. The wife is Mrs. Matilda L. Murray.

Mrs. Murray recently risked contempt of court when she refused, in defiance of a court order, to bring her children into the District to permit their father to see them.

Since then Murray has obtained an order which delegated to him the care and custody of the children, who are not within the District. Justice O'Donoghue made no move to place in effect the contempt of court order. The trial is expected to last several days.

Funeral services for Olaf Johnson, resident of Washington for 12 years, who died Tuesday, will be held at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 918 Cleveland avenue, Riverdale, Md., this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Parkwood Cemetery at Baltimore.

Born in Copenhagen, Mr. Johnson came to America when he was 12. He was a freight train conductor with the Pennsylvania Railroad for many years. Following his retirement he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Viola Pearce, 2910 South Dakota avenue northeast.

port said, the Budget Bureau should be completely reorganized and integrated with the Treasury so that it could exercise effective control over spending.

To revise "the archaic structure of the Treasury Department," the committee urged its functions be grouped into five main divisions—general administration, revenue, fiscal control, receipts and payment and purchasing.

Central System Urged.

The Treasury should formulate a central accounting system to coordinate accounting activities of all departments, the report said.

Division of authority between the Comptroller General and other executives of the General Accounting Office, the report continued, "is a continual source of conflict between them."

Describing the Comptroller General as a "little President," the survey asserted that in practice his statutory powers give him authority "over any administrative procedure that calls for the payment of money from the Treasury."

The committee suggested instead that he make a postaudit of all receipts and expenditures. He should continue, it said, as an agent of Congressional committee.

Submission of the budget to Congress on March 1 instead of in January also was proposed.

Mrs. S. C. Linton Dies at Her Home

Mrs. Sallie Chichester Linton, 84, died yesterday after a long illness at her residence, 22 R street northeast.

A native of Moss Hill, Va., she had lived in Washington for the past half century. She was the widow of William A. Linton, a coal and wood dealer.

Surviving Mrs. Linton are two daughters, Mrs. J. M. Williams and Mrs. R. R. Freese, both of Washington, and a son, William C. Linton. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Lee undertaking establishment, followed by burial in Congressional Cemetery.

$1,500,000 Adopted For Natchez Parkway

By the Associated Press.

Conferees adopted yesterday a compromise figure of $1,500,000 for the Natchez Trace parkway when they agreed on the Interior Department appropriation bill.

The House originally approved only $500,000 for the project, but the Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, increasing it to $2,700,000.

Bloom Finds Self On Spot With Bill For Scout Statue

By identifying "Uncle Dan" Beard as "the founder of the Boy Scouts of America" in a bill he introduced yesterday, Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, may have brewed himself a pot of trouble.

National Scout leaders explain that the 87-year-old National Scout commissioner, one of the heroes of American boyhood, was just one of the founders of the movement in this country. The actual founder and incorporator was William D. Boyce, of Chicago, now dead.

Bloom's bill provides for the erection in Washington of a memorial to Beard. Other Boy Scout heads, according to an official spokesman, had not been informed of the plan and, just to keep the record straight, they may seek to correct Bloom on that moot "founder" business.

"Uncle Dan," it was pointed out, is considered one of the founders of the Boy Scouts of America, but the founder? No, sir!

Fritz Kreisler, famous Austrian violin virtuoso, for transferring his contract sources of income to two corporations and then paying taxes on a lesser salary than his real income.

Sloan saved at least $128,528 in taxes in six years through his yacht corporation; Mrs. Cadwalader, on her yacht, in six years, at least $220,183; Alfred duPont, at least $200,437; Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, between $4,400 and $16,800, according to the way the figures are handled; Whitney, on his stables, at least $396,125; Mrs. Ross, on her numerous deductions, including her husband's salary, at least $172,469; Mrs. Mars, about $68,0000 in two years; Tree, a large deduction which was ruled fictitious and which he paid, later becoming a British citizen; Mrs. Miller, "substantial" savings; Lindback, about $86,741; Rionda, about $18,000; Ed Wynn, at least $198,728 in five years; Crosby, at least $72,941 in four years; Kreisler, at least $33,264 in three years.

Sloan, through the Associated Press in New York, said all his deductions were legal and that 50 cents of every dollar of his income went either to taxes or charity. George H. Barrows, a friend of Crosby, asserted here "Skippy" was incorporated to safeguard the cartoon royalties after Crosby's death for his family.

Arthur H. Kent, Treasury assistant general counsel, made the revelations.

Stuart Chase Urges Conservation of Land

Detroit, June 30 (AP).—A "new equilibrium" which will "meet nature's demands and at the same time allow us the benefits of the machine" was urged by Stuart Chase, author and lecturer, tonight as the only manner of conserving natural resources of the United States.

Chase spoke at the seventy-fifth annual convention of the National Education Association, which will close its sessions here Thursday. He warned that "what is taken from the land must be replaced" and told the teachers that "we must cease living on our capital."

Cabinet Lifts Gold Content Limit on Franc

the franc had been worth about 4½ cents. It had been maintained at that level through the operations of equalization funds in France, the United States and Great Britain, whereby the three nations had entered the foreign exchange market to buy or sell the others' currency.

Yesterday the new finance minister, Georges Bonnet, said France's equalization fund was virtually exhausted.

Monetary experts believed the franc probably would establish itself at around 4 cents. Normal business operations and relaxation of tension probably would stop it at that point, it was held.

The general belief was that the Government would set the franc's gold content at a quantity which would establish it at about 4 cents, approximately its value under the late Premier Raymond Poincare, who fixed it at 25.52 francs to the dollar.

Bourse Opens Today.

The Paris bourse and money exchanges will reopen tomorrow. They had been closed while the government pushed the decree-powers bill through Parliament. There was speculation on the effect the trading will have on the franc.

Authoritative informants said France had consulted both the United States and Great Britain, her partners in the tripartite monetary accord, before cutting her money adrift.

All indications were that the Paris administration wants to remain in close agreement with Washington and London on its monetary policy. Conversations were understood to be going on through diplomatic channels in the three channels to reach an accord fixing a definite relationship for the three currencies.

The government had decreed yesterday that debtors who owe bills in gold or foreign exchange be permitted to postpone payment, but tonight it eliminated that order.

British Fund Bill Advances.

London, June 30 (AP).—The $2,000,000,000 exchange equalization fund increase bill passed second reading today after Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon assured Commons the boost was not suggested by the United States.

Sir John admitted, however, he "did inform the head of the United States Treasury of my intention of asking Parliament to give this authority."

"The assurance I received was that this action had the warmest concurrence of the United States," said the chancellor, who earlier told Commons he was keeping close contact with the United States Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Finance Minister Georges Bonnet, of France, during the French financial crisis.

Cleveland, June 30 (AP).—Mounted police, swinging nightsticks, broke up a free-for-all fight today at the Stone Knitting Mills Co.

Approximately 300 American Federation of Labor unionists crashed through a Committee for Industrial Organization picket line of about the same number to reopen the plant, one of four knitting mills here closed by a dispute over union representation.

W. R. Woodworth, plant superintendent, said later 225 of the normal working force of 375 were back on the job and declared the concern would deal only the A. F. of L.

Oil Tank Cleaner Seriously Burned By Flaming Fluid

Harold Hampton, 24, of 61 H street northwest, was seriously burned Tuesday when cleaning fluid on a rag caught fire as he was cleaning out a fuel oil tank at the home of Mrs. Walter A. Brown, jr., 121 Primrose avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.

The fluid, highly inflammable, apparently was set fire by friction. Flames shot over the upper portion of Hampton's body.

He turned from the tank in the basement of the home, screaming and aflame like a torch, and so frightened Florence Todd, a colored maid that she leaped through a closed window and a screen. She was unhurt, however.

Hmpton was taken to Georgetown Hospital. He suffered second and third degree burns on the chest, shoulders and neck. He is employed by the George F. Lenz Coal Co., of Arlington.

Logical Bidding vs. Gambling.

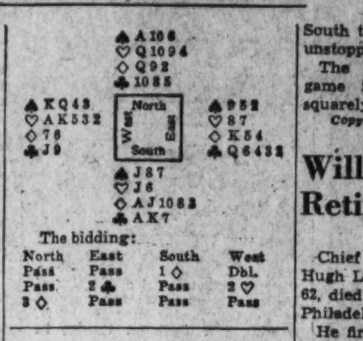
There is a vast difference between an inferential bid and a plain, hit-or-miss "stab" bid—to use a phrase in vogue among the experts. Almost all bidding involves some speculation. Usually, however, one partner is in a position to speculate along lines of probabilities, whereas the other may be forced to a sheer gamble. Consider the bad bidding in the hand shown below.

North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North's three diamond bid was virtually worthless as a constructive bid. South did not doubt that, since North had passed to the take-out double and then come into the bidding at a higher level, he had some values. But with both major suits unstopped South could hardly continue bidding on the mere suspicion that North had a good hand.

The decisive action on this hand should have been taken by North, not by South. The latter had opened the bidding, vulnerable, and North not only had stoppers in the major



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Dbl.
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 ♡
3 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

suits, but the fitting diamond Queen as well. Thus, instead of bidding three diamonds over two hearts North should either have doubled for penalties, or made the constructive call of two notrumps. Surely it was more logical for him to make the notrump effort with two outside suits stopped and club weakness than it would have been for South to take this action with two unstopped suits and club strength.

The blame for a lost laydown game in notrump may be laid squarely at North's door.

4 Policemen Face Charge of GamblingGraft

Indictments Due Today in Wide Racing, Numbers Investigation.

Indictments against at least four policemen for alleged activities in Washington's gambling world are expected to be returned by a District Court grand jury tomorrow.

The expected indictments culminate a 4-month investigation which has completely demoralized the District's million dollar race horse and "numbers syndicates.

With indictments against the policemen, the grand jury is expected also to return gambling counts against more than 100 men who were charged in connection with the operation of nearly 70 gambling joints raided during the four-month period.

Police have indicated during the last few months that several policemen, including detectives, have become involved in the inquiry, but the former have declined to mention any names. Yesterday it was learned the names of seven of the law-enforcers have been presented to the grand jury for alleged activities with gambling overlords.

Only Four Indicted.

Only four of the seven men are due to be indicted, though, The Post learned. The remaining three will have to face charges before a Police Trial Board.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said yesterday he had received no official word from the grand jury in regard to the evidence presented by Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman, who engineered the raids.

The police chief stated, however, that if any men under his command are named in the indictments they immediately will be suspended from the force.

"If any men are implicated in any gambling activities," Maj. Brown said, "whether they are indicted or not, they will have to answer charges preferred by the department."

Picked Force Used.

Truscott and Hartman, in conjunction with the district attorney's office, staged the wholesale raids over a period of four months. With a picked squad of rookie policemen, employing elaborate wire-tapping equipment, the drive was mapped.

Sixty-five beer parlors, delicatessens, pool rooms and private homes were smashed into by raiding parties.

More than 450 men and women were arrested and taken to police headquarters or precincts. Out of this number 132 were accused of being operators of the places and were charged.

Bonds totaling almost $400,000 were posted for the release of those charged.

Lieut. Truscott said shortly after the raids started that regardless of how many convictions the court returns, the gamblers willl "suffer severe losses due to the tremendous amount of bail they were forced to put up."

Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, U. S. A., 64, of 6510 Maple avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., retired from active military life yesterday. After attending a farewell review of the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer, Gen. Roberts was the guest of his staff at a reception held in his offices in the Munitions Building.

On April 1, 1936, Brig. Gen. Roberts assumed command of the Sixteenth Brigade, and upon the formation of the Washington Provisional Brigade last September, was placed in charge of the new unit.

Shortly after the war Gen. Roberts was on duty here at the War Department.

Entering the Army as a second lieutenant in 1897, Gen. Roberts served in Cuba during the Spanish-American War, and in the Philippines during the insurrection. He returned to this country in 1905 to serve as acting judge advocate, Department of Texas, with headquarters at San Antonio.

Served in France.

After attending the School of the Line at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Gen. Roberts attended the Army Staff College, also at Fort Leavenworth, remaining at the college as an instructor after his graduation.

As chief of staff of the Eighty-first Division, Gen. Roberts went to France on November 23, 1917. After his arrival he made an observation tour of the western front, and returned to the United States February 12, 1918. He sailed for France again on July 31, 1918, and served overseas until June 11, 1919, participating in the St. Die and the Meuse-Argonne offensives. After returning to the United States, Gen. Roberts attended the Army War College here, and upon graduation served in the office of the chief of staff.

Awarded Medal.

Gen. Roberts was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery at El Caney, Cuba, in assisting in the rescue of wounded from in front of the lines under heavy fire. For his World War service he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal with the following citation:

"For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services. He displayed unusual ability as chief of staff of the Eighty-first Division in its organization, and in the conduct of its operations in the St. Die sector, on November 9, 10 and 11, 1918, near Verdun, where the division was enabled to advance some 5½ kilometers over marshy ground under heavy fire."

Gen. Roberts also was awarded the Croix de Guerre and is an officer of the Belgian Order of Leopold.

Man to Be Tried July 9 In Crash Fatal to Son

Fredericksburg, Va., June 30 (AP).—Frank H. Lambert, jr., 27, Richmond tobacco salesman, who is under indictment for manslaughter in connection with the death of his baby son in an automobile crash on June 22, will go on trial before Judge Frederick W. Coleman, sitting without jury, in Caroline Circuit Court at Bowling Green on July 9 at 10 oclock.

Judge Coleman fixed the trial date today after granting Lambert's request for trial without jury.

One Skull Tells Skimpy Story, Hrdlicka Says

Vast Number Must Be Studied for Complete History, He States.

It is not all "heads you win" in the world of anthropology, according to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of phyysical anthropology in the Smithsonian Institution.

Skulls of ancient men may be found in perfect condition, preserved through centuries in stone settings, and still tell little about the race they represent or even about the man, according to his article in the latest Journal of Physical Anthropology.

The difficulty is that atavisms, apparent throwbacks to earlier types, or "prospective characters" forecasting future race developments, are likely to appear in any skull to throw investigators off the track.

In a report of findings based on thousands of skulls in the National Museum collection, he warns anthropologists against drawing too far-reaching conclusions from the study of a single skull. Measurements of many similar skulls must be taken before any true conclusions on race character can be drawn.

Dr. Hrdlicka also questions the existence of an ice-age land bridge between Asia and North America across which ancestors of the American Indians might have followed game into the New World.

Supporting evidence for his argument was drawn from Philip I. Smith, chief Alaskan geologist of the United States Geological Survey, who said:

"So far as my own experience in the Seward Peninsula goes, as well as that of present and former members of the Alaskan Branch, or of any of the records of the Geological Survey, there is no known evidence that proves a land bridge connection between the American and Asiatic continents during or subsequent to the glacial period."

Dr. Hrdlicka draws from researches by the late W. H. Hall, Smithsonian Institution biologist, to show that Bering Strait, where the land bridge is supposed to have been, marks a sharp break between types of animal life. Notably the musk ox and rocky-mountain sheep have left their bones scattered close to the American side, but no traces of them have been found.

Canal Hearing Set.

A special board of United States Army Engineers will hold a public hearing July 14 at Philadelphia on the Delaware River Canal, the War Department announced yesterday. Advisability of constructing the canal, its potential use and benefits to be expected will be discussed.

The Postilion Takes To The Road

It Still Is A Good Story.

The road from Middlesboro, Ky., into Pineville probably has more curves per mile than any road in the United States. The reason for this, according to old timers, is that Pineville wanted a courthouse; but by a direct route, it was too near Middlesboro, which already had a courthouse. It seems that there was a Kentucky law that courthouses must be at least 14 miles apart. So to get a courthouse of their own, Pineville built a winding road, which made what might have been a 10-mile route, 14 miles long. That's the story they tell, but I wouldn't swear to its accuracy.

TOM McCARTHY.

As you come down into Pineville, the mountains narrow in on you, and, as you enter the town, you have the feeling that the mountains are actually squeezing in on the houses, and that some day they might move and flatten Pineville to a tissue between them. The first houses you see are backed right up against the mountains, their front ends held up by stilts. They look as though they might tumble forward into the road at any moment.

It was dusk by the time I arrived at the hotel and set about looking for my friend, Lawrence (Peggy) Dwyer. "Peggy" Dwyer is a union organizer with more than 30 years of labor warfare behind him. Now he is a kindly, genial old man, more than 70 years of age, but he has a fighter's chin, and the way his eyes narrow and his chin juts forward when aroused gives you some insight into the reason he has been the target for more attempted assassinations than any other man in the history of the American labor movement.

• • • •

"Peggy" got his name after he traded in his real leg for a wooden one in a mine disaster 30 or more years ago. Since then he's broken a leg several times, but always the wooden one.

I found him out on the porch of the hotel, enjoying the cool of evening. He introduced me to his companion, a slender, quick, intelligent-looking little man of about 65.

"Mr. McCarthy," said Peggy, "I want you to meet Mr. Patterson. He's a fine lawyer—but he's an agent for the damned coal operators!"

Mr. Patterson laughed and said he was pleased to meet me.

I had to laugh at the idea of "Peggy" Dwyer and Mr. Patterson, professionally life-long enemies, joining each other at the end of a day to discuss the merits of mountain-made peach brandy and the history of Bell County, Ky.

"Peggy" didn't say much about Harlan while Mr. Patterson was there, but after he'd gone he asked me what I'd like to do.

I told him I wanted to go over into Harlan County and look around, and I asked him how things had been since the Senate Investigation into Harlan County's reign of terror which used to claim a half a dozen lives every month. He said things had quieted down a lot since the investigation and that there were more than 15 organizers in Harlan County, but he added that a leopard doesn't change its spots.

• • • •

I asked him what he meant by that. He said that things had been pretty quiet in Harlan, but one of the reasons for that was the presence of a contingent of G-Men. They had been collecting evidence in the county up until a few days before. He said that while he believed the worst was over, there was a slight possibility of another flare-up, now that the Government men had left.

One stabilizing factor over there, he said, was the presence of a corps of Kentucky State police, detailed by the Governor to keep order in "bloody Harlan."

With the promise from "Peggy" Dwyer that he'd take me over to Harlan in the morning, I started down the street to get a bite of food. A young fellow I'd noticed lounging on the hotel steps, who looked vaguely familiar, came up to me and asked me if I wasn't from Washington. I told him I was, and he explained he'd been up in WMAL's studio one night when I interviewed one of the Harlan witnesses over the air.

I asked the young fellow his name and invited him to come along and have a beer.

He was Lawrence Howard, who achieved some prominence at the investigation through a mysterious phone call which warned him to leave town. As he sipped his beer, he told me what he'd been doing since then. Having testified against one of the chief deputies, Ben Unthank, long in hiding and now out on bond, he was afraid to go back to Harlan County. He was living over in Bell County, and he claimed that he was expecting an attempt on his life.

Howard, a good-looking, curly-headed young man, doesn't appear much past his middle twenties, and as he talked quietly in the restaurant about expecting an attempt on his life, it all seemed a bit unreal. He claimed that one of his own relatives had been paid to kill him.

• • • •

I asked him if he were working, and he said that he wasn't. Then I asked him how he lived, and he said he had saved up a little money and was living on that. That also seemed a little peculiar because not many people save money in Harlan County, but I didn't press the question.

When, in a brightly lighted restaurant, a young man casually leans across his beer and says, without any particular show of emotion, "They'll probably try to shoot me in the back," you almost feel like saying, "Quit your kidding." But he wasn't kidding. It has happened in the past down in Harlan County—and often! People are casual enough about it, but they're not kidding.

If that conversation seemed rather fantastic the morning ride over to Harlan seemed more so. I rode over in a car with "Peggy" Dwyer, Tom Ferguson, Jim Bates and a man whose name I didn't get. All of them were organizers for the United Mine Workers. It's a 40-mile drive from Pineville over to Harlan, and as we rode along we passed a number of mining camps, the majority of them drab and dirty. I was informed that these shacks in which the miners live, rent for about $14 a month. A majority of them have no light or water. Water has to be carried in pails from a central source.

That ride into Harlan had an unreal quality. We were all laughing and joking about "bloody Harlan," and as we'd pass certain sections of the road, one or the other of the men would point out where on some occasion, he had been ambushed.

• • • •

Tom Ferguson, sputtering laughter, pointed out the rock from which he'd been shot through the shoulder. Jim Bates pointed out the curve around which he'd been driving when a slug tore through the car to lodge in his back.

Somebody started to sing "Git Along Little Dogie," and the driver recalled how the deputies had been singing that the time they took him for a ride and then changed their minds. It all seemed highly fanciful to hear a car full of good-natured men pointing out places where they'd been shot or shot at, but it's all been incorporated in the testimony before the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee in Washington.

About half-way to the town of Harlan, and just before you cross the county line, a large red and gray sign adds its touch of ironic humor. There are probably dozens of replicas of the sign all over Kentucky, placed on the highways by some religious group. Nonetheless, the sign gains a particular significance, placed as it is on the one road from Bell County into Harlan. It says, simply enough: "PREPARE TO MEET GOD."

The organizers all agreed it was very appropriate.

Tomorrow—McCarthy paints a picture of "Bloody Harlan County" as it is today.

Outlawing Thumbing

Doubtless the day is coming when the wayfarer with waggling thumb, otherwise known as the hitch-hiker, will no longer adorn the roadside. Walking will still be permitted along the highways, but the itinerant pedestrian craving a lift will have to depend upon voluntary proffers of a ride. He will not be permitted to lift a hand or wag a thumb in solicitation of a pick-up.

Fifteen States and the District of Columbia have already passed legislation which turns thumbs down on the thumbers.

With the outlawing of the thumb as a ticket for travel, the hitch-hikers will have to specialize in facial expressions calculated to soften the heart of the motorist. (Ohio State Journal.)

Housing Shortage

Writer Sees Need For Million New Dwellings A Year Instead Of 200,000 Erected By "Wasteful," "Backward" Industry.

By Catherine Bauer.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

REPORTS from all over the country bring home the fact that a national housing shortage is descending on us. While the general economic crisis has been lifting, the housing crisis has only just begun to be felt. Unless drastic steps are taken, it is likely to get much worse before it gets better.

The "housing problem" is no longer simply the question of a few blocks here and there of ancient derelict slums, dramatic in their frightfulness, but nevertheless limited in extent. That question is difficult enough—but today in addition we are faced with the problem of a general housing shortage, which affects everyone and disrupts the entire economic pattern of the country. On top of bad physical conditions—lack of air, sun, sanitation, play space, privacy—we are now confronted with rising rents, enforced doubling up, lack of available quarters for those who are forced to move or desire to set up new families—in short, every threatening proof of an "owners' market."

We must build more than a million new dwellings a year, if we are to avert the most demoralizing and rigorous shortage the U. S. A. has ever confronted. All reputable studies of quantitative housing needs agree on this fact. Also, we need to make sure that a large portion of these new dwellings are within reach of the lower income groups.

Consumers Clamoring For Widespread Building.

WHAT A GREAT opportunity for the building industry—a vast clamoring consumers' market, better educated in its demands than ever before! Most of the unemployed could be reabsorbed. The satisfaction of our housing needs within the next decade could lay the basis for a sounder and more permanent kind of prosperity than we have ever enjoyed.

But what about the industry which bears the responsibility of meeting this great need? Alas, it presents a dreary and even alarming picture. The private residential building business is in no state to profit by its present opportunity. The most wasteful, irresponsible, exploitive and backward enterprise in the country—it shows no sign of ability to meet even a fraction of the responsibility at its door.

The home-building industry has always been "a luxury trade," even though it supplies one of the basic necessities of human existence. Its potential market was limited to the richest third of the population, even during the boom era. Time and again I have had dramatic proof of this fact. At labor meetings all over the country, I have asked how many people in the audience had ever lived in a new dwelling, or one "just as good as new." And, even where the audience was largely made up of skilled, relatively well paid workers, the response was invariably either zero or so close to zero as to be negligible.

The home-building industry has also all the unhealthy earmarks of a "luxury trade" in exaggerated form. It is a speculative, quick-profit business rather than a stable investment enterprise. (Much of the ballyhoo for "home-ownership" is merely a more palatable way of saying, "unload and get out!") This means that almost no one, whether he lives in a $5,000 or a $50,000 house, gets good value in terms of tangible labor and materials, for the dollars he spends on rent or monthly payments.

Building Industry Market Declared Scarcely Broadened.

TODAY, after all the lessons of the past seven years, after all the taxpayers' money expended by the Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Housing Administration, there is little of any change in the picture. The effective market of the building industry has not been broadened. Today you probably cannot afford to live in a new dwelling unless your income is among the top quarter, and you won't have much choice even then. Today, with an immediate and critical shortage of at least three million dwelling units, with cheap money, with a nation-wide interest in improved housing conditions, with all the promotional efforts of the FHA, our rate of residential production is only about one-third of the average between 1920 and 1929. (We ought to double that rate, at least.) In 1936, instead of building a million dwellings, we put up less than 200,000!

And finally, today there are thousands and thousands of building trade workers still completely unemployed, many of them on relief rolls, while other thousands of building workers, highly trained for special trades, have given up the game as a bad job to raise families on, and are displacing other workers in other industries, often at much lower wage-rates.

The building industry has apparently little if any desire to reform. Even the very mild efforts of the Large Scale Housing Division of the Federal Housing Administration to improve neighborhood planning and promote a large-scale low-rental investment type of housing were doomed to dismal failure. Of the hundreds of projects submitted, 32 have been approved, which means that the Federal Government is willing to guarantee the major part of their financing. But of these only five have been completed and only eight are actually under construction. Inability to obtain financing, even with a Federal guarantee, keeps this program ineffective.

Why? Simply because the principal home financing agencies would prefer a shortage (which means a man pays 30 per cent of his income for rent instead of 20 per cent to any improvement in method or any broadening of the housing market.

Housing Shortage Implies Higher Rents For Tenants.

WHAT does a "housing shortage" mean?

First of all, rents go up. They go up much faster than wages. Everyone is forced to pay a higher per cent of his income for rent. This is probably the quickest and most efficient way that could be devised to lower consuming power, discount all industrial gains, hand undeserved plums to the most unproductive and exploitive interests in our entire national economy, and generally undermine any possible basis for prosperity.

Soon it becomes impossible for those who must move to find any available quarters at all. "Doubling up," already today very prevalent among the lower-income families, will spread into the middle classes. And a bad dwelling with two families in it is about ten times as bad as the same bad dwelling when occupied by only one family.

Then comes militant tenant organization, already very active in New York, Chicago, Detroit and all over Michigan, Washington, D. C. and many other areas.

Rent control is the next step. This puts a damper on new construction, and demoralizes the building and real estate business more than any conceivable program of public housing could possibly do.

And presently, unless the tenant organizations are exceedingly enlightened, comes some form of "emergency legislation" which may do much more harm than good.

At the same time, a bad shortage with all its attendant evils will almost certainly mean the collapse of all efforts to enforce building codes and other housing standards. The work of a generation of hard-working reformers will be wiped out in a few years.

Public Housing Said Not To Impede Builders.

IN SUCH a situation, it is silly to talk about public housing "cutting in" on legitimate private enterprise. If the few thousand dwellings provided for under the Wagner-Steagall bill were multiplied by ten they would still be no hindrance whatsoever to private construction. They would not even hurt the owners of old property except those of the most foolishly speculative or criminally exploitive variety. The only serious disappointment would be that of those banks who really want a bad shortage, because they would profit by families paying 30 instead of 20 per cent of their income for rent.

In England municipal housing to care for slum tenants and to remedy overcrowding enjoys annual grants from the government along lines similar to those set up in the Wagner-Steagall bill. In Scandinavia there are co-operative housing societies, receiving large state loans at low interest rates. And there is also municipal housing receiving annual subsidies from the states. New standards have beeen developed in this public-aided housing, which have favorably affected ordinary private production. A real start has been made toward stabilizing the building industry and the employment of building workers—due almost entirely to government leadership. And private enterprise is not only booming in these countries—it is building on a sounder financial basis and with better dwelling and site plans than it ever has before.

Bonnet's Turn

Saving The Franc Anew.

GEORGES BONNET, erstwhile Ambassador to the United States, is the latest of a long line of French finance ministers whose job it is to save the franc.

It has been saved on numerous occasions in the past. But each time the work of salvation has proved only temporary and has had to be done over again. This is the situation in which the French government finds itself now and there is no reason to doubt that M. Bonnet will prove less equal to the occasion than were his predecessors. But whether, in view of the existing situation, the stability of the franc can be established on any truly permanent basis is far from certain.

• • • •

LIKE SO MANY other problems that today plague the nations of the world, the problem of the franc dates from the war. And it is the circumstance that France, like the other countries of Europe, is except for actual fighting, again in a state of war which explains why its fiscal situation is serious and, in some respects, unsolvable.

Between 1914 and 1919 France financed the bulk of its needs through borrowing. This was admittedly an undesirable method of raising revenue. But it could not be helped. A pay-as-you-go war was something that might have been possible in the past. It was not possible under the circumstances that prevailed during the last great orgy of bloodletting and is not possible now.

After the war, therefore, France, like Great Britain, the United States and other former combatant nations, found itself faced by a vastly increased national debt the interest alone on which was in excess of the whole of the normal pre-war budget. This was bad enough. In France's case the situation was made very much worse by the vast costs of reconstruction and by pensions and other post-war needs. It was also made worse because the French permitted themselves the expensive luxury of harboring a dangerous illusion.

• • • •

THIS ILLUSION was that Germany could be made to pay all or a large part of the costs of the war; that the expected golden stream from across the Rhine would permit France to balance its budget, stabilize its exchange and live on Easy street.

It was an illusion fostered by the conservative and reactionary elements who, for the five years following the armistice, dominated French politics. Because of it the essential task of overhauling the antiquated tax structure was ignored. And it was in pursuit of this will o' the wisp that France occupied the Ruhr with all the disastrous consequences that this evil step ultimately entailed.

Actually, salvation by reparations never got very far although, on paper, Germany signed notes having a prospective face value of $33,000,000,000. The weakness of the franc, only occasionally overcome by the more or less heroic measures adopted by fleeting French governments, remained a perpetual Banquo's ghost.

• • • •

BY 1926 the situation threatened to get out of control altogether. Indeed it was so bad that Joseph Caillaux, the very mention of whose name made conservatives see red, was recalled to office after a long period of political exile and assigned the task of saving the franc.

There is no questioning his great gifts, exaggerated though they were by hope and the halo of martydom he wore as a prisoner of Clemenceau's. But he proved unequal to the task.

His plan of salvation by means of an American loan to be made possible through ratification of the Mellon-Berenger agreement, fell through. Parliament balked; the Briand-Caillaux government was overthrown, the franc began to slide toward that bottomless pit where rested the bones of the German mark, and revolution was very near in France.

The next savior was Raymond Poincare. The franc was devalued by four-fifths; the budget was balanced and kept balanced; and France entered upon a period of prosperity that continued without interruption until the second year of the world depression.

Then France's troubles began anew and a whole succession of temporary saviors had to be called in to rescue the water-logged exchange medium—Tardieu, Doumergue, Laval—their name is legion.

• • • •

THEIR DESPERATE devices have proved, it is now clear, unavailing. Last September the franc was again devalued. But M. Auriol as savior proved no better than M. Doumergue or M. Poincare. Otherwise M. Bonnet would not have been summoned post haste from Washington to do the job over again.

The problem, as it happens, is at bottom a simple one of bookkeeping. The stability of the French franc depends on the ability of the government to balance the budget. A balanced budget is only possible, if one or both of two things are done—if expenditures are cut down to match receipts or receipts are boosted to meet expenditures.

Increasing taxes will not, however, do the job if (a) the taxpayer is a turnip already squeezed dry, or (b) he has avenues of escape. During the past year billions in French capital have fled the country and an additional vast sum has been hoarded. Timidity and what looks like sabotage by the "200 families" have combined to make a bad situation worse. But as long as capital remains sequestered tax revenues are bound to remain below what the government has a right to expect.

As for cutting down expenditures, the fact is that France's ordinary budget, despite the expensive social program of the Popular Front, is not out of line with revenues. But this ordinary budget plus the extraordinary budget made necessary by rearmament has produced a very unbalanced financial situation. Yet no French government will dare, in the present state of affairs, to cut down expenditures for war-preparation purposes.

• • • •

HERE WE HAVE one of the horns of what may be an unsolvable dilemma. For as long as France continues to be, in effect, in a state of war a balanced budget cannot possibly be achieved and therefore the franc, no matter at what figure it is stabilized, will be in danger. Even Great Britain, that paragon of orthodox finance, is now budgeting a deficit disguised as a rearmament loan. And France, where no government has ever succeeded in cleaning up the Augean stables of an antiquated tax system, is in the same position—only worse.

This does not mean that M. Bonnet, who has now been voted extraordinary powers denied his immediate predecessor, cannot do much to better the present situation. He can. Devaluation may prove a useful shot in the arm. New taxes and better administration of the tax system, economies in various governmental departments, the restoration of confidence and with it the return of some of the "hot money" that has taken flight—all these may help. But in the last analysis no permanent salvation is possible for France unless the war clouds lift.

Slanguage

By William Lyon Phelps

'Limey' Slang.

A little while ago, I wrote an article in this column on slang; and I am glad I did, for it drew a most interesting letter from a Pennsylvania man who used to be a deep-water sailor and had been around old Cape Stiff. He gives me a character sketch of a seaman who had had many experiences and who talked a slang that only a few of the sailors could understand. He joined the ship at Valparaiso and was a great asset, for he was a first-class sailor and kept everybody amused with his stories and his language.

• • • •

My friend writes:

"Jesse knew more slang than any man I ever heard of or listened to, but it was all English slang and no one aboard could understand it except the 'limey' sailors. One day when someone happened to mention the narrow escape we had when we came through Le Maire Strait on our way to the Horn, without a smile, Jesse told us a whimsical tale about a voyage he made when the ship he was in passed through the Straits of Ballambangjazzer.

"It was amusing to hear Jesse tell of his experiences with some of the jobs he had ashore in various places, but his yarns would have been enjoyed more, if we understood the slang terms he used. He told us of one occasion when he was 'on the beach' in London, when a 'grasshopper,' whom he had met on a former visit helped him to get a 'berth' in Whitechapel 'piloting a piper towing a bird cage.' He had bad luck on his first night out, as he smashed into a 'pill box,' but the 'bobby' that 'glommed' him happened to be a good-natured 'bog-trotter' and instead of 'slamming' him in 'quod,' as he fully expected, he let him off with a 'sermon.'

Amelia Earhart Faces Supreme Test in Flight

Sailors, Guardsmen Watch Route From New Guinea to Tiny Isle.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Cutter Itasca, off Howland Island, June 30.—United States sailors and coast guardsmen set watch tonight along one of the loneliest stretches of the earth's surface to guide Amelia Earhart on the longest, most hazardous flight of her career.

The Itasca and the cutter Ontario awaited word of her take-off from Lae, British New Guinea, for a 2,570-mile nonstop flight over equatorial seas and island jungles to Howland Island, an almost microscopic bit of land representing America's frontier in the South Pacific.

Miss Earhart notified the Coast Guard she would start, weather permitting, at 1:30 p. m. Thursday, local time, or 10:30 p. m. E. S. T. tonight, to continue her "just for fun" world flight.

Half way between New Guinea and Howland the Navy tug Ontario stood by to work by wireless with Miss Earhart's plane and to go to her aid if necessary.

At Howland, work crews prepared to shoo flock of huge birds from runways constructed months ago in anticipation of flying activity between the United States and the land "down under."

The new Guinea-Howland hop not only was the longest ever projected by Miss Earhart, but also a real pinoeer aviation project. No airplane ever before ventured that route.

The course crosses many small islands where savagery and even cannibalism prevailed not so long ago. Rain squalls are frequent.

The flight offered a supreme challenge to Capt. Fred Noonan, Miss Earhart's navigator. Howland Island stands only a few feet above the sea at high tide and is only ½ mile wide and 2 miles long. Between Lae and the island Miss Earhart will cross both the Equator and the international dateline.

President Vetoes Non-Bid Carrying Of Star Route Mail

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, declaring the competitive bidding system is "fundamentally sound," vetoed yesterday a bill which would have permitted the Postmaster General to renew "star-route" mail contracts without asking for bids.

Star routes serve communities not on regular train and steamship lines. Such service is provided by horse-drawn vehicles, motor cars, airplanes—and is some cases dog teams.

The bill vetoed would have permitted extension of the contracts without bidding for terms of four years.

Children Prepare For Church Fete

Children at Petworth and Brightwood neighborhoods were busy yesterday decorating bicycles, wagons and anything else on wheels in preparation for a parade Monday night opening the eighteenth carnival of St Gabriel's Church.

The Rev. William J. Sweeney, carnival director, announced prizes would be given for the best costume, the best decorated wagon, girl's baby carriage, and best-looking bicycle, in addition to the usual prizes for business floats.

With music by five bands, the parade will march at 6 p. m. from Georgia avenue and Kenyon street northwest, north on Georgia to Decatur, east to Illinois avenue, then south to the carnival grounds at Grant Circle. The American Legion color guard, with Lieut. Horace W. Lineberg, District commander, will head the procession.

Siemon, Phone Co. Auditor, Retires

After completing 35 years of telephone service, Charles Siemon, auditor of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., retired yesterday.

The occasion was marked by a testimonial dinner given at the Harrington Hotel by 150 of his friends and associates among the officials and employes of the company. A gold wrist watch was presented to Siemon as a farewell gift.

Siemon began his telephone career as a clerk in the plant department of the company in Baltimore in 1902. He was made chief clerk in 1910 and plant accountant in 1913. In 1929 Siemon was made auditor of disbursements of the company in Washington, and was appointed auditor in 1930.

Better Seed Grain Ordered in Soviet

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Russia At The Pole.

Moscow has claimed the North Pole. It's about the last place you'd expect to go Bolshevist, but these are curious times.

• • • • •

The Communists now claim to control more floating ice than any political system on earth.

• • • • •

Mikhail Vasilievitch Vodopynoff, Ivan Papanin, Pyoto Shirsoff, Eugene Federoff, M. S. Babashkin, S. A. Ivanoff, Prof. Otto J. Schmidt and other Soviet fliers and scientists dropped down on the ice by Soviet plane the other day and immediately announced that the Pole was 100 per cent Russian.

• • • • •

The United States and other nations pointed out that as there is no land at the North Pole and only international waters covered with ice, it can't be claimed legally by anybody, but Russia continued to stage celebrations over its capture in the name of Socialism, Bolshevism, the U. S. S. R. and Stalin.

• • • • •

• • • •

A Commissar of Pemmican seems certain but gumdrops will be barred as a symbol of capitalism.

• • • •

The flying envoys from Soviet Russia landed, put up five tents, started light housekeeping, knocked the icicles off their whiskers and in one voice shouted, "So this IS Russia!" And they shouted it into a microphone.

• • • •

Stalin was so delighted he suspended mass executions for 24 hours, called off all pending group trials for the next few days and almost consented to have his picture taken for the newsreels driving a dog sledge.

• • • •

It seemed to be unanmously conceded throughout the Soviet Republic that the ice faced a better future under Soviet rule.

• • • • •

In one way it was typical of Communism: no sooner had the boys landed than they started a world-wide argument.

• • • • •

Mr. Roosevelt's Dilemma.

Oh, what to do, oh, what to do?
In much unhappiness I stew
A chance to name a youth, I've won . . .
And now they hand me Robinson!

For younger judges I have fought
And now an opening I've caught,
But who looms up, oh man alive,
But good old Joe, who's sixty-five!

Al Smith, in Naples, says he never had a minute's seasickness and still dosen't know what it is. Wait until he tries one of those Neapolitan taxicabs!

Finding Is Keeping.

The hell with Bryd and Peary,
With Amundsen and Scott,
With Greely and with Whitney!
We claim the Pole, so what?

Dr. G. A. Mills, of the University of Cincinnati, says a way has been found to air-condition soldiers in hot climates. We'd like to see it tried out on Smed Butler or Hugh Johnson first.

The news that something has been done toward streamlining Army mules is anticipated hourly.

Al Smith will, of course, include in his itinerary the City of Bologna.

There is this to be said now that Soviet Russia has taken over the North Pole: from now on nobody will have to search for it; they can hear it.

WPA Sure to Cut Rolls by July 15

By the Associated Press.

WPA officials reaffirmed last night their intention of trimming work relief rolls to a total of 1,655,477 employes by July 15.

They said the reduction is necessary to fit relief employment to the $1,325,000,000 provided for WPA by the $1,500,000,000 relief bill which President Roosevelt signed into law today.

The attainment of the July 15 goal would mean a reduction of 315,000 employes from the June 5 total.

Tax Collections In '37 Largest For 16 Years

Spending Below 1936; Gross Debt Biggest in History.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury closed its ledgers last night on the last 12 months of Federal finance, recording the largest tax collections in 16 years.

Figures for the last few days of the fiscal year which ended at midnight were not available for publication immediately. Compilations covering operations through June 28 showed, however, that cash has flowed into the Federal till at the rate of $14,500,000 a day since last July 1, compared with $11,300,000 daily during the preceding year.

This year's income, which reached $5,264,599,000 on June 28, topped last year's by $1,178,174,000 and 1929's by $1,231,349,000. It was the largest since 1921, when war time taxes pumped $5,624,932,000 into the Treasury.

Spending Reduced.

Federal spending for the year just ended was recorded at $8,055,138,000 through June 28, or $22,200,000 daily. The total was $751,785,000 below that of last year, when funds left the Treasury at the rate of $24,300,000 daily.

Both spending and income exceeded President Roosevelt's revised estimates, outlays going $171,000,000 over his forecast and revenues $40,000,000. Reports for the last two days of June will increase these figures further.

On June 28 the Treasury had a $2,790,539,000 gross deficit and a $36,396,809,000 gross debt. The debt was the highest for any fiscal year-end in history.

While Treasury experts prepared final tallies on the year's operations, Mr. Roosevelt signed into law two bills levying taxes for the future.

"Nuisance" Taxes Extended.

One of the measures he approved extends 3-cent postage and a score of so-called "nuisance" taxes for two years. The "nuisance" levies and the 3-cent postage are expected to yield about $625,000,000 during the fiscal year beginning tomorrow. The taxes include those on gasoline, telephone and telegraph messages, amusements, automobiles, firearms, radio sets and mechanical refrigerators.

The other measure signed provides levies on railroad payrolls and the wages of their employes, levied to finance a Government-supervised system of old-age pensions for rail employes.

New 'Duck Stamp' For Fowl Hunters Is for Sale Today

Sale of the new Federal migratory bird hunting stamps, which have to be carried by all waterfowl hunters over 16, was to begin this morning at all postoffices.

The stamps show five scaups, or broadbills, settling down on Atlantic Coast feeding grounds, and were designed by J. D. Knap, of New York. Slightly larger than a special delivery stamp, they sell for $1 each.

Proceeds of 90 per cent of the sale of "duck stamps" are turned over to the Biological Survey division of the Department of Agriculture for esstablishment and upkeep of migratory bird refugees.

100 Geisha Girls Strike, 'Lie Down' in Temple

Tokyo, June 30 (AP).—A hundred Japanese geisha girls went on a "lie-down" strike today, demanding an increase in fees for entertaining gentlemen friends.

The girls in the little port city of Kisarazu went to an old Buddhist temple, 16 miless inland, where sympathetic monks provided them with food and prayer beads. Then the geishas reclined on the floor, vowing they would starve unless their demands were granted. Mediation efforts were started.

DuPont-Roosevelt.

There was a pleasing contrast between yesterday's ceremony at Christiana Hundred, near Wilmington, and the last "big" wedding the world pried into—that held recently in a French chateau near Mons. The youthful freshness of Miss duPont and young Mr. Roosevelt made, of course, the principal difference. But this was not the only dissimilarity. Though both marriages were packed with political implications, these weighed little at Wilmington, while they almost prevented the affair at Mons.

Of course, the politics in these two cases are not comparable. But the extent to which political considerations, entirely aside from mutual respect and affection, influenced the two matches is significant. The Old World still places an outmoded emphasis on the externals of the marriage institution; a man there is still expected to wed with an eye to the social, economic and, in the case of a royal personage, the political consequences of his move. Here, in contrast, marriage for every one is an entirely personal affair and no question of a father's politics or economic affiliation is allowed to intrude on the union of a couple. This democratic tendency in social relations is a characteristic of which the United States may well be proud.

One other comparison may be made between these two weddings. It concerns the years that lie before the two prominent couples. The Roosevelts are reported to be planning to live in Charlottesville while the young husband studies law. They may expect some photographing and publicity when they first settle in their new home. Even after this they must be prepared to have the limelight sweep over them at intervals. But, by and large, they will not face the constant irritations which will dog the Duke and Duchess of Windsor forever.

The Roosevelts, if they live the happy and productive life their extraordinary opportunities should insure for them, will receive little more attention than any other successful couple might expect. And this pleasant future, as they set out together, the whole Nation sincerely wishes for them.

Helpful Conversations.

The communique issued at the conclusion of the conferences which Premier Van Zeeland has held during the past few days with President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and other high officials of the Government is necessarily couched in vague, if friendly generalities.

In the face of the present disturbed and constantly fluctuating world situation it would have been little short of a miracle if, after these talks, any concrete measures had been agreed upon regarding trade, currency, armaments or any other subjects that were apparently discussed.

No immediate, concrete results were expected from these conversations. It was clearly understood at the time of Premier Van Zeeland's departure for the United States that his mission was primarily exploratory. He came here to find out where this Nation stood on certain questions of major international concern and in turn to explain the attitude of the leading European democracies. Presumably this exchange of views was satisfactory to both President and premier. Certainly Mr. Van Zeeland has revealed himself in his public talks as a man of real stature, well fitted to be the spokesman of European democracy to the United States and the interpreter of the American attitude to the free nations of western Europe.

However aloof our traditional policy may be toward the political problems facing the Old World, the United States on more than one occasion in the recent past has shown a deep interest in helping advance Europe's economic welfare in which we and the rest of the world have a real stake. On this question President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Premier Van Zeeland appear to be in complete accord. As the communique notes, there is a real disposition on the part of the United States "to co-operate in the joint work of rebuilding international trade, continuing co-operation in monetary matters and seeking arrangements whereby the burdens and dangers of overwhelming armaments might be reduced or the method of their employment safeguarded."

The situation may not, at the moment, be ripe for concrete action with respect to any of these problems. Nonetheless, only good can come out of such exploratory efforts as those undertaken by Belgium's young premier in conjunction with American leaders.

What Cure For The "Plague?"

President Roosevelt is undoubtedly right in his appraisal of the public reaction to the current strike. The unbending attitude of the steel executives has alienated the sympathy of the great majority who believe in collective bargaining. And the C. I. O. has carried its violent tactics to a point that has alarmed numerous communities and given rise to potentially dangerous vigilante movements. In these circumstances, there is a general re-echoing of the words which the President borrowed from Shakespeare: "A plague on both your houses."

Mr. Roosevelt had previously commented on the unreasonable objection of the steel companies to the signing of contracts. Now he has also positively condemned the lawless fringe of John L. Lewis' organization. This rebuke from the White House came at a timely moment, just after a series of lawless acts on the part of strikers had culminated in the dynamiting of water mains at Johnstown. President Roosevelt is only one of many friends whose sympathy the strikers have lost by resorting to terrorism of this sort.

To some extent, moreover, the President's statement clarifies the Administration's labor policy. The President's silence on the "sit-down" strike, Secretary Perkins' strange proposal to Gov. Davey, the refusal of the Postoffice Department to deliver to steel plants mail found objectionable by the C. I. O., coupled with the generous campaign contributions of that organization to the President's last campaign, have aroused suspicions that should not be permitted to stand. The President cannot too emphatically disavow any sympathy with lawless or violent tactics on the part of groups that support him politically.

Mere expressions of disgust will not extend very far, however, toward remedying the serious conditions which have arisen in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and other States. In the industrial crisis through which the country is passing the Administration's labor policy has been singularly ineffective. Stubborn employers have been able to camouflage their opposition to collective bargaining with the very terms of the Wagner act, and employes have been either unable or unwilling to invoke that measure. Hastily improvised mediation machinery has also broken down.

Since the President's policy offers no cure for this "plague on both your houses," his Administration has a real obligation to consider amendments to the present law. When a government helps to bring powerful forces into play, with a view to social betterment, it is certainly responsible for the control of those forces in the public interest. A truly objective attitude, therefore, calls for re-examination of the Wagner act and correction of the defects that have contributed to the extremist tactics now under White House condemnation.

As The Fiscal Year Ends.

Advance estimates furnished to President Roosevelt by the Budget Bureau indicate that the deficit for the fiscal year ended yesterday amounted to $2,670,000,000. Including cash outlays to finance the gold sterilization program, however, the deficit would be about $1,000,000,000 higher. While either total is well below the deficit for the preceding year, it is, notwithstanding, a formidable figure at this stage of recovery.

The President rightly attaches great importance to the fact that since the end of December the increase in the debt is roughly equivalent to the amounts expended for gold purchases, transfers to the veterans' insurance fund and to the old-age reserve and unemployment trust funds. As his comments imply, deficits due to obligations incurred under the social security program belong in a different category from those traceable to other types of expenditure.

Appropriations for the social insurance reserve funds, for example, are bookkeeping charges on the expenditures side, entailing no corresponding cash outlays. As these funds are invested in Government securities, it is not necessary for the Treasury to borrow in the open market to finance deficits created by such appropriations. Hence, it is easy to understand the President's gratification over the fact that allocations to pension reserves and the gold sterilization program just about balance the debt rise.

Receipts from pay-roll taxes, moreover, are at the disposal of the Treasury and may be used to meet current outlays. With approximately $1,000,000,000 in such taxes expected during the coming fiscal year, there is an excellent chance that the Treasury may have a cash surplus available to acquire bonds for the social security funds.

A number of "ifs" are attached to this possibility, of course, the chief uncertainty being due to the gold program. If gold should continue to enter the country in large amounts and to be impounded as at present, the debt may continue to rise. Otherwise, if Congress refuses to approve unbudgeted appropriations, and if revenue returns come up to expectations, a large excess of cash receipts over cash expenditures may be obtained. In that case the Treasury would be in a position to begin buying in Government securities for the account of insurance reserve funds.

Even if the coming year should witness such a shift of this sort, it does not follow, of course, that the budget will be restored to balance or that the necessity for economy will be in any way relieved. In fact, it is especially important to call attention to the extraordinarily high level of expenditures when the necessity of borrowing or of imposing new taxes to cover current outlays no longer exists. The budgeted expenditures for the coming year remain at burdensome levels and actual outlays may be considerably higher. For that reason those who realize the importance of a reduction in the scale of expenditure regard with mixed feelings the prospect of a shift from deficit financing to a regime of surpluses attributable primarily to the windfall social security taxes.

An Indefensible 'Rider.'

A provision slipped into the independent offices appropriation bill just signed by the President requires that all lawyers and experts employed by the Social Security Board at salaries of $5,000 or more shall be appointed by the President subject to confirmation by the Senate. This indefensible "rider," interpolated by pork-hungry legislators, has brought public expressions of regret from the President. His assertion that the change is "unfortunate" is a decided understatement, however, in view of the seriousness of the situation created by this irresponsible move.

At present the Social Security Board voluntarily submits all appointments to these higher paid positions for the approval of the Civil Service Commission. It is most essential that the difficult technical tasks of administering the new system shall be undertaken by thoroughly qualified persons. Yet Congress has now intervened to throw these key jobs open to spoilsmen by making appointments dependent upon senatorial confirmation.

This change not only affects 45 experts and 17 attorneys now employed; it also prevents the board from making any further appointments without ascertaining the wishes of Senators. As employes are prohibited from receiving compensation until their appointments have been confirmed, the board may be seriously handicapped by inability to take on new employes when Congress is not in session.

President Roosevelt's recommendation that these positions should be brought within the civil service system would merely legalize the practice that the Social Security Board has been following. It would, however, afford protection against a future change of policy and also provide a defense against the assaults of the spoilsmen who have turned covetous eyes on the new jobs created by the social security act.

If prompt action is not taken to undo the mischief that has been perpetrated, the wage earners of the country may have cause for bitter regret. Insertion of the little "rider" makes it possible to substitute place hunters whose qualifications are chiefly political for experts trained to undertake the technical work essential to efficient administration of the social security system.

Eight Pan-American Pacts.

The Senate's unreserved approval of the treaties, conventions and protocol signed by representatives of the United States and 20 other republics at Buenos Aires last December deserves unstinted praise.

It is a heartening reflection of this Nation's will to peace. And it should spur the other American republics to similar action. Only too often in the past, agreements enthusiastically approved at Pan-American conferences have fallen by the wayside after the delegates have returned to their capitals. It has been much easier to secure signatures for such pacts than to get them ratified. As a result, previous peace efforts in this hemisphere have represented a good deal of lost motion.

It would be a pity if the Buenos Aires agreements encountered a similar fate. No conference of recent times has been held in an atmosphere of more general amity or has been imbued with a greater determination to limit the incident of war than that held in the Argentine capital. Now that the United States has placed itself among the first to ratify the eight instruments, a lead has been given which the other nations of the New World should be quick to follow.

Federal inheritance tax rates have been hiked to the point that nowadays the happiest mourner at a rich man's funeral is Uncle Sam.

Nearly all business concerns seem to be trying to cover too much territory these days except the swim suit manufacturers.

The broader the mind, the narrower the conscience.

Publicity And Egyptology.

From the Sphinx (Cairo).

In the past we have on occasion criticized the antiquities authorities for their extreme reticence. Egyptology was such a serious business, it appeared, that its devotees could never bring themselves to admit a discovery until it had been tested and retested. Even then publication of the news was usually due to a leakage, much deprecated by the authorities. For some time past the attitude has changed, at least as concerns certain members of the department. At the risk of being accused of never being satisfied, we think some protest is now due in the absolutely opposite sense to our last complaint. With unfailing regularity "sensational discoveries" are being announced every ten days or so, not through official sources, be it said, but "from information received" by the local press. The stories are religiously cabled abroad and scientific circles get all excited about them. Eventually, however, the sensations fade away into nothing at all or nothing of any very great importance.

"Radical" duPonts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
At this time much newspaper space is given to the nuptials of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Miss Ethel duPont. And naturally this brings in much discussion of the economic views of the duPonts.

My family, having resided on the Brandywine Creek in Delaware and Pennsylvania for a long, long time, and as neighbors of the duPonts since 1802, I have some information that may be interesting.

Many of the duPonts had what are termed radical views. The late former U. S. Senator T. Coleman du Pont was a "Single Taxer," and so was Francis I. duPont, who at one time was treasurer of the duPont company. The latter was the author of several treaties on the "Single Tax" and a "Single Taxer" around the year 1920 was considered a "radical."

The younger generation of duPonts have some radical views also. Not all of them are Republicans. THOMAS R. MECHEM.

Fascist Threats Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
None can now deny that the Fascist-minded millionaires and billionaires are gradually spinning a web throughout our land, from which we will never be able to extricate ourselves, unless we act—now. Time demands that we decide quickly. Shall we continue to enjoy our happy, democratic rule or shall we allow the Fascists to harness us like they harnessed the people of Italy, Germany and Ethiopia?

We no longer have to go to Berlin or Rome to find fascism. It is already here in our Congress. I saw its bloody hand on June 28, when Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg, of Michigan, introduced an amendment to the Wagner labor act to purge the "foreigners" from labor unions. If this amendment is enacted into law it will give the employers the right to crush all unions with the force of arms if necessary. This would be the end of all unions, because all unionists would be branded as "foreigners." And the moment unions are crushed fascism is in power.

If Senator Vandenburg had introduced an amendment to purge all the Fascists from the employer group instead, it would be not only democratic, but really American.

Impartiality Of The Press.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In your paper of June 18 appeared an article, taken from Editor and Publisher," in which the impartiality of the American press is extolled, and the Catholics of the country who have had the temerity to ask for a vigorous condemnation of the butchery of priests and nuns in Spain and the persecution of the church in Mexico, receive a rap on the knuckles and are told to behave themselves in the future.

The implication is that such Catholics are downright unpatriotic in trying to embroil our country in a dispute by having our editors condemn some foreign ruler or government. The hypocrisy of this is very apparent to anyone who has read the almost daily diatribes against Hitler and Mussolini for intolerances far less grievous than those committed against Catholics in Mexico and Spain.

This, notwithstanding the fact that Germany and Italy are the very sore spots affecting the peace of the world. Timid editors who fear offending the "legally established government of Spain," do not hesitate to probe within the dangerous boil. Oh, inconsistency, thou art a virtue!

No, the American press, at least the greater part, is not unbiased, is not impartial—in my opinion. And it will take more than the spellbinding sophistry of the writer of the aforementioned article to convince me.

The Pivotal Year.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
A typographical error in my last letter with reference to labor causes a further reply. The approximate date when the change came from the hand-manufacturing age, to the mechanical automatic age was in 1922, not 1932, as the type made me say. 1932 was a pivotal year, but not when the actual change came. That it can be seen that 10 years, from 1922 to 1932, was allowed our national legislators in which to meet the new changes relative to labor, caused by the changed conditions in manufacture, but having no vision, the matter was let drag along until millions were out of work because of automatic devices, and 1932 came as a destructive whirlwind.

Security Today.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Mr. E. O. Jacobson's kindly and beautifully written letter published in The Post of June 28 impels me to attempt to "brush the gossamer web" of apparent misunderstanding from some of his ideas.

He says that the insecure of our population are largely the "congenitally inefficient" individuals. The recent depression has proved to us that in this age where machine power and improving techniques are increasingly throwing people out of work, no one is secure. Not only may any artisan lose his job, but, because of overproduction, the value of any stocks and bonds may fall and even the security of the rich may vanish overnight. Before the depression, Aetna Life Insurance statistics showed that only 16 out of every hundred men were enjoying economic security at the age of 65. In 1930 some emergency relief jobs paying $15 a week were opened up and among those who applied for them were five architects, five statisticians, six social workers, eight journalists, 19 accountants, 19 doctors, 22 commercial artists, 23 teachers, 26 engineers, 35 actors and 58 musicians.

Mr. Jacobson says that the "abundance" in America is only "in raw materials and not in goods that have to be manufactured by somebody's toil of brawn and brain." Why, then, do we have to have so many millions spent on the advertising of manufactured products if there is no overabundance of them on the market? A perusal of Stuart Chase's "Economy of Abundance" published in 1934 will "brush the gossamer web" of misunderstanding away on this point.

And also may I call Mr. Jacobson's attention to the fact that the same Jesus who said "the poor ye have always with you," told the rich young man to go and sell all that he had and give to the poor. In the year of our Lord 1937, when we can easily produce twice as much as we do, there is no need for one-third of our population to be "ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-fed" even if God did make it "congenitally inefficient." You can't blame a man for the way he is born nor should he be punished unnecessarily for it.
AMERICAN WOMAN.
Washington, June 29.

Baltimore's Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In reading the "Epic of America," I come to the account of riotous conditions that existed in Baltimore about a hundred years ago, resulting from much the same conditions as exist today.

The City of Baltimore was at the mercy of a mob. "A body of citizens," says James Truslow Adams, "met in the Exchange and were busy drawing up a set of resolutions in favor of public order while a crowd of drunken men and boys were absurdly threatening the town.

"An old revolutionary soldier, 84 years of age, finally broke in with 'Damn your resolutions. Give me a sword and 30 men and I will restore order.' 'But, Gen. Smith,' said the man who was proposing the resolutions, 'would you fire on your fellow citizens?' 'Those who break the laws, drive their neighbors from their houses, plunder their property, and reduce their wives and children to beggary, are not my fellow citizens!' thundered the old man, who was soon after elected Mayor of Baltimore and did restore order." ("The Epic of America," pages 224, 225).

The lesson of this relation from the past and its analogy to present day happenings are so obvious that comment is scarcely necessary. Those who by bombings, incitement to mob violence and general flouting of the law seek to deny to others the right to work and other natural rights are not fellow citizens but outlaws and criminals and should be treated with less mercy than an invading foreign foe.

The All-Star Team.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I have read Shirley Povich's article of June 28. I agree with him 100 per cent, and I admire his spirit for not being backward in writing what he thinks is right about Joe McCarthy's pick of the all-star team. I think all the Washington fans agree with him.

It seems to me friendship must have been the basis for the selection of Cramer, Averill, Moses and Di Maggio over Johnny Stone and Selkirk; also Jimmie Foxx over Bonura. Why does Ferrell rate better than Weaver or Red Ruffing? As for Red Rolfe, I would hate to say anything about him, as it might hurt McCarthy's feelings.

My idea for an all-star team would be let the sports writers vote for the ones they think should play. I am sure they would give the ones a chance that deserve it. It would be a bettetr balanced team.

French As Spoken.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
A letter in The Post of June 28, headed "not 'Lon' but 'Lan,'" takes Prof. William Lyon Phelps to task for his pronunciation of the name of a certain French city.

As asserted, "Laon" undoubtedly rhymes with "taon" and "paon," the "o" in each case being silent. Nevertheless, to the average American ear the French nasals "an" and "on" sound much the same, and they are easily confused. And if correctness in French is the matter at issue, what shall we say of the sentence serving as a signature for the letter: "Le francais tel qu'on voit le parler?" All I make out of it is: "French as one sees speech," though, perhaps, "Le parler francais tel qu'on le voit" was intended. More probably the writer merely transposed the "le," thereby making it appear as the masculine definite article instead of the masculine personal pronoun. In that case the sentence should read: "Le francais tel qu'on le voit parler," i. e., French as one sees it spoken."

But French logic would scarcely tolerate so absurd a statement. For who but a lip-reader really sees a language spoken? Why not, therefore, "Le francais tel qu'on l'entend parler," or "French as one hears it spoken?"

The Post Impressionist

An Even Hundred.

AMERICA is a celebrating as well as a celebrated Nation, though it is true perhaps that all peoples like to celebrate. For some reason centennials appeal to us: they afford opportunity to have centuries of progress, expositions, fairs and speeches; to write odes and elegies; to issue new postage stamps, commemorative coins and memorial volumes; and, perhaps most significantly, to look back into the romantic past, take stock of our departed heroes (both foreign and domestic), and exclaim: "They must have been great men—they've been dead an even hundred years!"

There seems to be little rhyme or reason in our celebrating. This year, for instance, there was a great to-do in certain circles over the one-hundredth anniversary of the death of Alexander Sergeyevich Pushkin, the great Russian poet, who was killed in a duel, who has been proclaimed a genius, but who is practically unknown to the philistines outside of Russia. Just why we should celebrate a person's death is not quite clear. (We always say "commemorate," of course.) Perhaps it is as G. K. Chesterton once wrote of Lord Clive:

> What I like about Lord Clive
> Is that he is no longer alive.
> There is a great deal to be said
> For being dead.

Pushkin without doubt deserves to be remembered. A new biography of him (for which William Lyon Phelps said he had been waiting 40 years) and new editions of his poetry have been published this year. But there has been very little said about another great poet, an Englishman, who has been dead 300 years—no other than Ben (christened Benjamin) Jonson, Shakespeare's contemporary, whose "Song to Celia" ("Drink to Me Only") vies for first place in the list of English songs oftenest sung and at the same time oftenest misquoted. O rare and immortal Ben! I hope I shall be here in 1973 to help celebrate the quadricentennial of his birth.

And there are others now in the Elysian fields who, I think, are not getting their just due this year. What about Nero? It hardly seems possible that Nero, sixth emperor of Rome, was born exactly 1,900 years ago come next December 15, the very same year as the Jewish historian Josephus and just 1,700 prior to Edward Gibbon, who wrote "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Now Nero, judged from the history books, probably does not deserve to be remembered, yet his nonchalance and his prowess as a musician during heated times have made him famous in spite of everything. Historians will tell you that he was profligate, tyrannical, brutal, incendiary, vain; he was so bad that at the age of 31 he had to stab himself. But he was a poet, philosopher, actor, musician, and charioteer. How many today can equal that? There is indeed no accounting for fame.

But we have been fairly busy this year with American celebrities. Tom Paine (born 1737) got a new biography, and I suppose a few wreaths were surreptitiously laid at his monument in New Rochelle. Though he lived too long and died a natural death, Paine is apt to be remembered as long as Nero. This year has been also the centenaries of J. Pierpont Morgan; Admiral George Dewey; Grover Cleveland; John Burroughs, who rated special ceremonies at Oneonta, N. Y., on his hundredth birthday last April 3; and William Dean Howells, American novelist, whose publishers to honor his centenary are bringing out a new edition of his most popular book—"The Rise of Silas Lapham." The English poet Algernon Charles Swinburne got a few notices on his hundredth birthday, April 5—Swinburne, who wrote poems that "came very near to producing apoplexy among critics and to shaking and disturbing severely one old-established firm of publishers."

Even principalities and powers! One hundred and fifty years ago this year our Constitutional Convention was held in Philadelphia. Philip Guedalla has just published his book "The Hundred Years," with Queen Victoria's accession in 1837 as the starting point. Little, Brown & Co., Boston publishers, are celebrating their hundredth birthday, and the Saturday Review of Literature gave them a special 24-page supplement. The Baltimore Sun is just a hundred years old, and fitting observances have been held. What a year 1837 must have been!

Finally, one is loath to forget that magnanimous old Syrian sultan Salah-Ed-Din Yossuf Ibn Ayub, better known as Saladin, born 800 years ago this year, who in his will made bequests to Christians, Mohammedans, and Jews alike, and is said on his death to have ordered his winding sheet carried through the streets while a crier proclaimed: "This is all that remains of the mighty Saladin, conqueror of the East."

sitions which dominate traffic in the river.

A Japanese army announcement said one gunboat sank, a second was disabled with heavy losses and finally stranded on the beach, while the third found refuge behind an island.

Japanese sources reported the Russian Amur River fleet, numbering more than a dozen gunboats, and many seaplanes were being concentrated for a counter-attack.

Powerful Japanese-Manchukuoan reinforcements were being rushed to the river to prepare for possible eventualities in a tense situation.

Talks With Litvinoff.

Only yesterday the ambassador conferred with Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs, over conflicting Russian and Manchukuoan claims to the Sennufu and Bolshoi Islands in the Amur.

It was proposed troops and naval forces be withdrawn from the vicinity of the islands and a commission investigate the border problem.

There were no reports of the number of casualties. Each of the three gunboats was believed to be of about 1,000 tons and manned by 60 sailors and officers.

Japanese officials here alleged Russia repeatedly has attempted to blockade the channel of the Amur during the four-month period each year when the river is open for navigation.

They charged the Russians have caused Manchukuo infinite trouble and great losses in revenue.

The frontier between Manchukuo, Japanese-inspired state, and Siberia long has been disputed. Before creation of the state, Russians enjoyed a virtual monopoly of the Amur River.

Various attempts by Russia and Manchukuo to establish a definite border along the 3,000-mile frontier, especially in the Amur area, have failed.

Both sides reached a waterways agreement in 1934, but Russia denounced it some months ago.

Japanese Preparing Drive.

Peiping (Thursday), July 1 (U.P.).—Chinese press dispatches from Wkeihua, Suiyuan Province, today reported increased Japanese military activity in that region and new concentrations of Manchu-Mongol armies which were driven from the province last year by central Chinese government forces.

Chinese feared that the long-expected new Japanese drive into Suiyuan and western Inner Mongolia might be impending. Japanese airplanes were active all day yesterday flying over Suiyuan in groups of three or four. They were sighted at a dozen places. Land scouting patrols also were reported.

Moscow, June 30 (A.P.).—Japan's ambassador to Russia made clear today that Japan intends to protect fully Manchukuo's claim to islands on the Amur River, also claimed by the Soviet government.

Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu's stand was voiced shortly before he departed for a midnight conference at the Russian foreign office and before the Japanese and Russian governments had exchanged sharp protests on the basis of a reported clash between Soviet-Manchukuoan forces near Sennufu Island in the Amur section.

Diplomatic quarters watched the situation closely.

Miss Gwen Geach Is Appointed To Head Minimum Wage Board

Group to Operate on Curtailed Budget of $8,615.

Miss Gwen Geach yesterday received the $2,500-a-year secretaryship to the new District Minimum Wage Board. She has been in State and Federal labor endeavors most of her life.

The appointment was made by Mrs. William Kittle, John H. Hanna and Arthur L. Schoenthal, who soon will be hearing disputes between employes and employers, arising from the Supreme Court's recent validation of the old wage laws here.

The Board will fix hours of work and minimum wages for women in the District and also for minors.

A sharp cut in the Congressional appropriation for the board's personnel, from the $14320 asked by the Commissioners, to the $8,615 granted, will curtail the board's staff. Two field inspectors and a stenographer will use up the entire appropriation, with $575 remaining for equipment.

Miss Geach has served with the Wisconsin State Industrial Commission, on which Mrs. Kittle likewise began her public career. She and Mrs. Kittle also were officers of the National League of Women Voters.

Since the NRA, with which Miss Geach was a field representative in Omaha, she has been with the Resettlement Administration, as manager of four subsistence homesteads.

Private Building Up 124% Over Last Year

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—A gain of 15 per cent over last year in engineering construction awards for the first half of 1937 was reported today by the Engineering News record. Private awards were 124 per cent higher while public awards were 23 per cent lower than the corresponding six months last year.

Cumulative totals for the first half of this year were $1,245,428,000 compared with $1,121,375,000 in the first half of 1936. Private awards during this period totaled $640,258,000 compared with $298,630,000 last year while public awards amounted to $605,170,000 against $822,745,000 in the first half of 1936.

Colored Woman Held in Series of Arlington Thefts

Washington and Arlington police yesterday arrested a young colored woman, sought in connection with a series of burglaries in the county, in a shop on Seventh street northwest dealing in second-hand clothing.

According to Detectives Woodyard and Jones of Arlington County, the woman, Ruth Mosley, 22, of the 900 block of M street northwest, was offering for sale a suit of men's clothing. A watch was found in her possession, the officers reported.

Detectives said they hoped to connect the woman with eight burglaries in the county during the last 90 days.

In a room in Washington, said to have been occupied by the woman, officers reported finding several hundred dollars worth of men's and women's clothing and some jewelry.

James Ball, brakeman, was injured. Cause of the explosion was undetermined.

Parkers Appeal WendelKidnap Terms; Bailed

Father Gets 6 Years, Son 3 in 'Plot,' Sequel to Lindbergh Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., June 30.—Charged by the court with having made a "mockery" of the processes of justice in New Jersey, Ellis H. Parker, 65-year-old county detective, was sentenced today to serve six years in a Federal penitentiary for plotting the fantastic Wendel sequel of the Lindbergh baby case.

His 26-year-old son, Ellis, jr., convicted with him by a jury of eight women and four men a week ago after a nine-week trial, was sentenced to three years, Judge William Clark stating he believed Ellis, jr.'s, actions were due in part, at least, to "loyalty" to his father.

Execution of both sentences was stayed indefinitely by the filing of an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Officials expressed belief the case would not be decided before fall. The Parkers were freed under $20,000 bail each.

If their convictions are upheld, the senior Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives for 44 years, may apply for parole after serving two years and Parker, jr., after serving one.

Both men listened attentively as Judge Clark censured them before imposing sentence. Both remained calm when the prison terms were meted out and neither would comment.

The Parkers were found guilty of conspiracy to seize Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton attorney, and force from him through torture a "confession" that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. The "confession" was subsequently repudiated and discredited, but an investigation of it delayed for three days the execution of Bruno Hauptmann 15 months ago.

Three other men who pleaded guilty have not yet been sentenced and no date has been set. Two of them, Harry Weiss and Martin Schlossman, were convicted in Brooklyn on a New York State charge of kidnaping Wendel and have begun 20-year prison terms. The third, Murray Bleefeld, pleaded guilty to the New York charge also and is awaiting sentence there.

Suicide Verdict Is Upheld in Death of Burns

2d Coroner's Jury Rules G.W.U. Sophomore Took His Own Life.

A two-months-old suicide verdict in the death of Byrne T. Burns, George Washington University sophomore, was upheld by a coroner's jury last night after a day-long inquest—the first of its kind on record here.

The unusual case was reopened on request of the 18-year-old youth's bereaved parents, Dr. and Mrs. William B. Burns, 3100 Ellicott street northwest. They appealed for a reversal of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald's earlier suicide decision.

At the hearing Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, testified he was "convinced beyond a doubt" that young Burns did not take his own life.

Died April 11.

The boy was found April 11 lying on the bathroom floor of his home, a bullet wound through the forehead. Beside him—some feet away—was a .38 caliber revolver, a present from his father.

The wound was described by Dr. MacDonald as a "contact wound," inflicted by pressing the weapon's muzzle against his head.

Guns, it was testified, were the boy's hobby. He had several around the house. The night before he was found shot, Byrne had been cleaning and repairing his firearms, the jury was told.

It was suggested he accidentally shot himself or fell in the bathroom with the gun in his hand.

Poison Theory.

If the boy "had any reason to end his life," the parents contended, he would undoubtedly have resorted to poison. He was studying chemistry, had several strong poisons in his laboratory and knew their powers of inflicting instant death.

Only 1 Police Witness Admits Riot 'Brutality'

Chicago Group Questioned Six Hours in Inquiry Over Strike.

the department favored closing industrial plants that are picketed, was tabled by the House yesterday.

Police Commissioner Allman, who issued instructions but was not on the scene of the Chicago disorders, was first on the stand yesterday. He said he assumed full responsibility for the conduct of his officers and believed they were carrying out their duty to "preserve law and order."

He was followed by Chief Prendergast, of the uniformed forces, who was in immediate charge, but not at the scene.

"Did the conduct of the police meet with your full approval" asked La Follette.

"I would say yes," said Prendergast.

Shot in Back.

It was while Allman was on the stand that La Follette referred to the coroner's autopsy report showing seven of the ten men killed were shot in the back. Allman said he had not seen the report, and an inquest has yet to be held.

"It would be easy for them to be shot in the back by their own men," Allman said. He referred to a report by Kilroy that officers had fired in self-defense while lying on the ground.

La Follette said he couldn't understand how even an officer lying on the ground would be able to hit in the back a man who was attacking him.

"You can't do target practice on the ground," said Allman. "They might have missed the man aimed at and hit someone else."

Later Capt. Mooney, who was in charge of police at the steel plant, gave it as "his opinion" that those shot were shot by police.

La Follette and Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, took turns in examining witness. Both questioned Kilroy on his failure to include in his official report the fact that other than policemen were injured and the first shots he heard "came from the crowd."

"I overlooked it," said the witness.

Holds Reports Incomplete.

La Follette introduced two official reports made by Kilroy. The Senator protested they were not "full and complete."

La Follette also introduced a letter from Chicago police headquarters saying none of the city's tear gas stock was "expended" at the time of the clash.

La Follette asked "whose gas was used" against the strikers.

"I don't know," replied Mooney. "It might have been city gas and it might have been company gas. Let me say this, if there'd been only company gas there, I'd have used it."

With Kilroy on the stand, Senator Thomas asked why photographs showed two types of batons wielded by police, the regular black clubs, and white ones Kilroy said did not appear to be "regulation."

Clubs Possibly From Plant.

"Possibly they came from the steel mill," the witness volunteered. "They might have them over there."

All officers testified police were instructed not to buy or accept any food from the plant's cafeteria, but Pendergast said he thought some obtained food there the first day.

Mooney accused "Communists and Red agitators" of inspiring the demonstration and said he "wouldn't be surprised" if some of them were "paid by Russia."

"May I make a recommendation?" asked Mooney. "If I were the Senate committee I would deport all of these Communists. That would put an end to these riots and assaults on police. You ought to send them back to Russia—back with Lenin."

Thomas asked what Mooney meant by "Communists."

"I call them Reds," said Mooney. "I'll tell you what my definition of a Red is. He's here to undermine Government and assault police. And there was a drive over there that day by Red agitators to march on police and enter that plant."

Questioned on "Communists."

Thomas mildly asked if Communists "want to kill people."

"Those I've met do," said the heavy-jowled officer.

"But I don't understand," said Thomas. "I thought people killed for a purpose."

"I suppose they have nothing personal against us," said Mooney. "We represent the Government—that's the only reason Communists go after police."

Mooney said he had known Communists to leave Chicago "for instructions."

"Where did they go?" asked Thomas.

"They went to their capital," said Mooney.

"Where is that?" pressed Thomas.

Strike Riot Pictures Exhibited

News pictures made at the Memorial Day strike riot in Chicago in which ten persons lost their lives were used at Civil Liberties Committee investigation yesterday. Senator La Follette, as he waved one of the photos before Capt. Thomas Kilroy, of the Chicago, police, asking, "Aren't you ashamed of it? Isn't it pretty brutal?" "Yes," replied Kilroy.

Troops Mobilized as 2 Mills Prepare to Reopen in Indiana

of Canton's striking C. I. O. steel workers' union, charged an unidentified Ohio National Guardsman fatally clubbed a picket tonight near the Republic Steel Corporation's plants.

Beckner, addressing a C. I. O. rally, declared a man he named as Chris Lopez, a striking Republic employe, was struck on the head a few minutes earlier by a Guardsman who ordered him to "move on."

Police Sergt. Ed Woolslayer claimed the picket was a victim of heart failure.

Lopez was declared dead upon arrival at Mercy Hospital.

The East Chicago announcement followed a strife-marked maneuver to evacuate 2,000 nonstrikers who had been interned in the Canton plant of Republic Steel since May 25.

At least eight persons were injured and 75 pickets were arrested in the Canton melee, but the relief movement was successfully carried out under the protection of Ohio National Guardsmen.

Seeks to Block C. I. O. Suit.

State officials sought to keep them there. Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy asked a continuance of the C. I. O.'s Federal court suit to enjoin Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio from using the troops to protect back-to-work movements.

Federal District Judge Mell G. Underwood said late today he would decide by 10 a. m. Thursday whether he had jurisdiction to hear the suit and also will rule then on a motion by Attorney General Duffy to dismiss it.

Another court issue involved in the 7-State strike appeared imminent when Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, announced he had received a telegram from Gus Hall, strike leader, saying he would surrender to Warren, Ohio, police on charges he was the "brains" of a dynamite terror conspiracy aimed at Republic Steel.

Hall, who could not be found when three of his alleged associates were arrested, declared the chargess were "an unadulterated frame-up inspired by Republic Steel."

Campaign for Workers.

As violence broke out at Canton, a citizens' committee at Johnstown, Pa., the strike-sieged scene of Bethlehem Steel's Cambria works, pushed a Nation-wide campaign for "protection of the right to work for all who want to work."

Johnstown's militant Mayor Daniel J. Shields, foe of C. I. O. forces in his city, haled two strike leaders before a special session of the city council and bluntly requested them to leave town.

He said their presence was "inimical to community peace"—a charge which James Mark, white-haired Steel Workers Organizing Committee leader, countered by asserting he had been "kidnaped" and brought before a "packed court."

Mark refused to leave the city and asked State Police Capt. William A. Clark for a bodyguard. The request was refused.

New dynamite blasts sounded along the strike salient in Ohio, with explosions damaging a water main at Canton and ripping out a metal culvert on a road alongside the Republic Steel plant at Massillon.

The blasts came within 24 hours after Police Chief Barney Gillen, of Warren, Ohio, announced he had "smashed" a bomb-throwing "terror" ring, headed, he said, by Hall.

Today's trouble at Republic Steel's strike-beset mills in Canton developed when several hundred pickets, many of them women, threw rocks at non-striking workers as they left and entered the plant in automobiles, under the protection of Ohio National Guardsmen.

Telephone wires were ripped from poles.

Guard Uses Planes.

Two low-flying guard planes acted as "eyes" for the guardsmen, spotting scattered disorder and sending guard detachments to quell them.

The Youngstown steel mill district returned to the normal three-shift operating basis today, plant managers reported. They said 32 out of 47 open hearth furnaces were working and that 90 per cent of their forces were back.

Officers Fire on Strikers.

Marenisco, Mich., June 30 (AP).—Several shots were fired today in a fight between State police, sheriff's officers and 300 to 400 striking lumberjacks. No one was struck by the gunfire as the officers fired over the heads of the crowd. The strikers had stoned five trucks hauling logs for Arvey Ahonen, of Ironwood, Mich., as they approached the western limits of Marenisco. Forty-six strikers were arrested.

Ford Blames 'Pay Dictators' In Union Drive

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 30.—The Ford Motor Co., in an article in its 'almanac' for July, asserts that "the true meaning of this drive" (against the company) is an effort on the part of certain unidentified financiers to set up "wage dictatorships."

"Ford voluntarily has paid his employes the highest industrial wages in the world," the article says, and adds that this "is the one and only thing that keeps wages up all over the country."

No direct mention is made of the unionization drive against the Ford Company, nor the recent complaint of the National Labor Relations Board that charged it with violating the labor relations act, but one paragraph reads:

"Should you sign away your rights, you will find out, a little later on, when all industries are under one control, that Ford cannot raise wages in his own plant . . . he would not be allowed to."

Ford "Fights for Justice."

The article is introduced with the statement that "wherever in America an industrial worker strives to better his condition, he joins the fight for industrial justice which Henry Ford has been leading for more than 30 years." It reviews Ford's own experience in the workshop, cites the inauguration of the $5-a-day minimum wage in 1914, and adds:

"Ford's minimum wage today is $6 a day for an eight-hour shift.

"Ford's high wage is the one and only thing that keeps wages up all over the country. If Ford should lower wages—or should any law or agreement restrict his freedom to raise wages—wages would go down all over the country.

"With Ford paying $6 a day, the financiers also are forced to pay high wages in their plants to attract labor. They want that stopped.

"That's why they are again trying right now to force Ford to do business their way.

True Meaning of Drive.

"That is the true meaning of this drive to force Ford to accept an outside party as a wage dictator for Ford employes. . . . The next step in the game of the financiers will be wage standardization. All plants of the same kind will pay the same wages. The skilled worker will have lost the benefit of his skill—because he will then have no market where he can sell it for a price higher than that named by the wage dictator."

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate which is seeking to unionize Ford employes, said tonight the claim of high wages paid in Ford plants "is a Ford myth."

He said, "We know that the Ford workers receive less than the Chrysler and General Motors employes."

Creditors' Loan Urged To Fund Reich Debt

Berlin, June 30 (AP).—A plea for an earmarked loan by Germany's creditors to enable the Reich to fund her high interest debt as made today at the third plenary session of the International Chamber of Commerce.

F. D'Arcy Cooper, London soap manufacturer, said creditor countries should grant such a loan to Germany, "whose economic plight continues to cause uneasiness."

Woman Sentenced In Jenkins' Death

Mrs. Anna M. Sanford, convicted recently on a manslaughter charge in District Court, yesterday was sentenced to one to three years by Justice Jesse C. Adkins. The court contended the woman was not entitled to probation.

The woman was convicted of the charge when police testified William Jenkins, a retired fireman, bled to death in a rooming house conducted by Mrs. Sanford several months ago. It was shown that there were many injuries on Jenkins legs that might have caused him to bleed to death.

A second woman, Edna Weaver, was cleared, when Justice Adkins directed the jury to return an acquittal verdict.

You Are Invited to See the Exhibit of the Replica of the Shrine of the CONSTITUTION of the United States
A Special Invitation Is Extended to the Boy Scouts attending the Jamboree

One hundred and fifty years ago, the first meeting of the Convention called to revise the Articles of Confederation of the 13 States was held in Philadelphia. In commemoration of this event, and in co-operation with the UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION, created by Congress, and headed by President Roosevelt, Woodward & Lothrop is now showing exclusively in Washington, a full-size replica of the Shrine of the Constitution, on our First Floor.

The replica contains photostatic facsimiles of the CONSTITUTION AND THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, the originals of which are in the Shrine at the Library of Congress. For the practical purpose of examining the text, the facsimiles, which were made from the 1823 copper plate reproductions, are superior to the originals, which have been somewhat faded by time. The Shrine will be on view to the public here for the next two weeks, a portion of the period of the CONSTITUTIONAL SESQUICENTENNIAL, which ends September 17th, the date upon which the Convention reached the end of its deliberations and the signed Constitution was submitted by the deputies to Congress to be passed on to the States for ratification.

Visit the Shrine and study the historical material—photographs, broadsides, handbills, posters of the period—included in the exhibit.

The CONSTITUTION is the object of Nation-wide interest at this time. Young and old, and particularly the BOY SCOUTS of every nation here for the Jamboree, are urged to familiarize themselves with its text and its part in the creation of American right and liberties. Visit this Shrine, sponsored by the Sesquicentennial Commission, and encourage others to do likewise—particularly the younger generation, to whom the nation looks for the perpetuation of its ideals.

The Story of the Constitution

Obtain your copy now, there is use for one in every home and school room.

A special BOY SCOUT EDITION of the Story of the Constitution is being sold here for the same price, 10c a copy.

A limited quantity of Souvenir Post Cards, replicas of the Howard Chandler Christy painting executed especially for the BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE in connection with the 150th Anniversary of the Formation of the Constitution of the United States, is available, free of charge, at the exhibit.

F STREET ENTRANCE, FIRST FLOOR

'Um' Is Useful, Esperanto Fete Delegates Find

Only One Session to Be Limited to 'Universal' Language.

Probably the most intriguing word in Esperanto is "um," which means exactly what it sounds—nothing in particular. It's a trick word registered and copyrighted exclusively by Esperanto, and no other language has it, which is a shame.

This handy little monosyllable was explained yesterday by H. L. Shatford, spokesman for a convention of Esperantists, convened this week at the Hamilton Hotel, where they're celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the "universal" language.

Supposing a young Esperanto gent sees a pretty young Esperanto belle at a party. They're having one, incidentally, Saturday night at the hotel. He approaches her and says:

"Chu vi permesus dansi kun mi?"

Obviously that means "May I have this dance?"

She smiles, rises, and says sweetly:

"Jes, se vi deziras." (Yes, if you wish.)

Asks If She's Married.

They sweep out onto the floor as the orchestra gets in a bit of its universal language also. He continues:

"Mi ne aukorau rekonitis vin—kiu estas via nomo?" This translates, as you may have guessed, "I haven't met you yet. What is your name?"

Flirtatiously, the young Esperanto damsel replies:

"Ne gravas."

So it doesn't matter, she thinks. But he does.

"Certe estas, char mi volas se ghi komensas kun Signorino," he retortes quickly.

The gentleman has just told her:

"Yes, it is important. I want to know if there is a Mrs. in front of it."

"Why?" she inquires, forgetting her Esperanto for the moment.

"Mi amas vin," he gurgles.

News in Any Language.

That means "I love you," which always is interesting news to a girl in any language.

Now comes the "um" part. If he had made a slight change in his pronunciatoin and said, "Mi umas vin," it would have meant something quite different, not shocking, you understand, but a bit more sophisticated.

Changing amas to umas meant "I love you with reservations." It's a great word. It makes everything nice, but indefinite. You can shove it into the middle of practically any word in Esperanto and cast a charming nuance of indefiniteness over the whole thing.

No other language on earth has a word like it, according to Mr. Shatford, who is quite proud of the word, or syllable. He smiles like a man with a mouthful of 1929 Chateau Qquem when he rolls it around in his throat. Um. What a word!

The Esperanto movement, despite this asset, is not a surging typhoon of success. They've been trying to establish the language for 50 years now, but to date can number only 6,243 members in 57 countries, which isn't very many per country, or per year.

Only one session of the Congress here will be conducted in Esperanto. "Otherwise," said Shatford, "some of the delegates might not understand what was going on."

Roosevelt Signs Relief Measure, Batch of Others

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt wrote his signature to a big batch of bills late Tuesday night and yesterday morning.

They included:

The $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation for the new year beginning tomorrow.

An extension of so-called nuisance taxes for two years. The taxes apply to a variety of things from automobiles to cosmetics.

A tax bill to finance the new railroad retirement bill. It applies a 5½ to 7½ per cent levy to railroad pay rolls, employer and employe sharing the burden equally.

Two Patrolman Ordered Retired

Retirement of two veteran policemen was approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

Both men were retired because of physical disabilities. They are L. Jones, Tenth Precinct, and Frank S. Marshall, Third Precinct.

Jones, 41, was appointed to the force in 1919. He was promoted to precinct detective in 1929. He recently was returned to ranks.

Marshall was appointed in 1923 and has received numerous commendations.

New York, June 30 (AP).—Robert Irwin, after a formal denial in court that he was guilty of the Easter morning slayings on Beekman Hill, waited tonight a call to trial for the murder of a beautiful artists' model, her mother and a roomer in their home.

Church Budget Control Taken Over by Nazis

Government 'Authorities' to Dictate Matters of Expenditure.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 30.—Finances of Germany's Protestant churches came under control of the government tonight.

Hans Kerrl, government minister of church affairs, announced creation of "budgetary authorities" to regulate all church activities involving expenditures, including the fixing of clergymen's salaries.

His decrees were interpreted as marking a new effort by the government to master the confessional synod, which consists of "fundamentalists" Lutherans and Calvinists who oppose Nazification of the Protestant churches.

The synod holds that the Nazis wish to establish a religion without Old Testament teachings—inasmuch as those come from the Jews—and to present Adolf Hitler as God's prophet.

Only Monday the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the Confessional synod, asserted a new wave of anti-Protestant action had brought the arrest of 102 Protestant pastors within eight days. Between 30 and 40 had been released, he said.

The budgetary authorities whose creation was announced by Kerrl will be directly responsible to the government—not to the church—for the economical administration of funds contributed by the government to the church or collected from the taxpayers for the church.

Heretofore the state merely has contributed money to the church and collected church taxes from church members, leaving it to the church to spend the money as it saw fit.

Each district budgetary authority will draw up the annual church budget for a district. Kerrl specified that it will be up to the budgetary authorities to see that "the greatest economy is observed."

Not only the pastors but all the church employes will have their pay regulated by the government-appointed bodies.

Presumably even payments for foreign missions and welfare projects will require approval of the budgetary authorities.

They also will be responsible for carrying out whatever instructions Kerrl may issue regulating expenditure of state contributions or church tax money.

With the date for the government-ordered election of a Protestant Church administration not yet set, Kerrl forbade use of the Protestant churches for election purposes and prohibited campaign meetings until the date is fixed.

While here to get the $1,000 reward from the detective magazine in which she saw Irwin's picture, Henrietta hopes, she said, to line up a job singing with an orchestra.

Marine Subsidy For U. S. Lines Starts Today

Merchant Fleet 'Second to None' Is Aim of Government.

New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Co., $205,200; Oceanic Steamship Co., $287,300; Pacific Argentine Brazil Line, Inc., $133,040; South Atlantic Steamship Co., $108,000; United States Lines, Inc., $750,000, a total of $4,645,579.50.

While these lines, it was estimated, would have received $8,058,892 in the six months under the mail contracts, $487,984 of this sum would have been actually earned by carrying mail at usual rates, leaving the actual subsidy under the contracts at $7,570,908.

In the settlement agreements, the United States pays the Panama Mail Steamship Co., $1,350,000 for ship construction allowances, but other lines pay the United States a total of $601,367.59 for various United States claims, in addition to $1,971,868.70 in satisfaction of loans and ship sales notes.

The United States claims involved the question of the validity of the ocean mail contracts, failure to complete voyages, failure to meet speed qualifications "and many other irregularities."

Building Program.

The switch to the operating subsidy system, which means an extensive shipbuilding program of replacements for old vessels now operating, follows by a few weeks President Roosevelt's request to Congress that the Commission be authorized to expend up to $160,000,000 in construction subsidies, which, it was estimated, would finance the building of some 96 new ships. Under the merchant marine law the Government grants construction subsidies based on the difference between cost of construction here and abroad.

Chairman Kennedy said yesterday, in connection with operating-subsidy agreements, that tentative plans for construction of 28 ships already are in hand.

Illustrating the competitive disadvantage of American ship operators, he pointed out that the wage costs of some foreign lines are less than 20 per cent of American wage costs.

151 Ships Start.

He said 151 ships would start operating under the subsidy today, while there are about 460 American vessels engaged in foreign trade.

After explaining the operating subsidy, the chairman said:

"By this method, Government aid to merchant shipping is placed on a frank understandable basis. * * *

"The commission believes that by these settlements and new subsidy contracts, important progress has been made toward the goal of an adequate American merchant marine."

A Boy Scout's Dream Come True—25,000 Around a Campfire

Rain or shine, when Boy Scouts get together, in the open, it's certain to be around a campfire. Each and every boy attending the Jamboree—largest youth gathering America has known—was on hand last night for the first of a series of night celebrations. They heard Attorney General Homer Cummings deliver the personal greetings of President Roosevelt. About 15,000 onlookers were beyond the barricade.

District Court Asked to Force Bank Payment

Seventh Street Institution's Receiver Says Stockholders Liable.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Homer Cummings and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senate majority leader, were closeted in Robinson's office for more than an hour yesterday. The subject of their discussion was not revealed, although it was presumed that the fate of the court bill, soon to be debated in the Senate, was at least referred to.

The Senator's secretary, affable Joseph Robinson, jr., told a reporter that the visit was "of no significance, just a friendly chat." At this moment the Senator appeared. The reporter, picking up the phrase, said:

Robinson answered swiftly:

"Of course, it's significant! Whenever the Attorney General calls on me it's significant!" He turned sharply on his heel and withdrew, significantly.

N. B.—Arkansas judiciary appointments have recently all been filled.

AN ECHO of one of the Nation's most historic battles—the fight over the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations—was heard faintly in the Senate Tuesday as the South American treaties were adopted. Tall, young Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts), rose to ask if Executive L, one of the treaties considered, in any way "commits the United States to the decisions and actions of the League of Nations."

He was assured it did not. He then asked how Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, stood on the question. Senator Borah, smiling in memory of 18 years ago, said he favored the treaty's adoption. Lodge sat down.

In 1919 Senator Borah and the senior Henry Cabot Lodge led the successful fight to keep the United States out of the League.

ONE TAX LAWYER of the horde attending the sessions of the joint Congressional committee on tax avoidance and evasion does not regard the exposure of the names of wealthy tax avoiders and their lawyers as in any way harmful to reputation. Yesterday he sighed:

"I only wish my name headed the list of lawyers who think up these schemes to dodge taxes. It's the best advertising in the world. I'm only afraid my client will think I'm laying down on him for not thinking up some of those swell loopholes."

* * * *

ANOTHER TAX LAWYER said: "The Treasury doesn't take the right attitude toward losses. My client, for instance, lost $35,000 betting on the races last Saturday. I was there and saw it. Now he can't deduct that as a loss. It's disallowed. So he has to fix up the loss some other way that is deductible so that he won't have to pay taxes on that money. The Treasury doesn't see it that way, though. But what can my client do?"

"He can stop betting on the horses," said a committee clerk dryly.

THE KEENEST INTEREST in the Capitol right now is centered around the suppressed movie film of the Chicago Memorial Day riot—or massacre, depending on the viewpoint—which the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee will exhibit in open hearings this afternoon. Standing Room Only signs will probably be unnecessary, as Senators, Representatives, clerks, officials of all sorts, and every newspaperman that can wangle a seat will jam the place to the point of closed doors soon after noon, it is expected. Those who have seen the film say that even the strongest stomachs feel faint during the scenes where the police are shown shooting and clubbing fleeing strikers.

Roosevelt, returning the bow, promised to "come back another time."

At the reception, the President, after keeping in the background throughout the day, became the life of the party, and though he originally planned to leave at 10 p. m., had such a good time he stayed 45 minutes longer.

As the Presidential party reached the duPont home, Roosevelt, preceding the women of his party into the house, was met by duPont. First there was a long bow from duPont. Then:

"Welcome to Owls Nest" (hearty cordiality).

"Thank you, sir," replied the President, bowing in return and smiling broadly. "And I'm coming back another time."

Kisses Bridesmaids.

The duPont retort, accompanied by a laugh and handshake, was:

"The next time bring some white flannels."

President Roosevelt made a joyous ceremony out of the traditional bridesmaid kissing. First he kissed the bride, who held onto his lapel and whispered something that brought another Presidential laugh. Then he kissed the bridesmaids, maintaining a running fire of laughing conversation all the while.

The bride's costume, details of which were kept secret from the public until late yesterday, was fashoned of white tulle lined with white crepe under a net clouding and set off with a 12-foot train, bordered with an inch-wide ruffle of the same material. The bouffant skirt, billowing out from the bands of shirring from waist to hips, had a narrow girdle of wax orange blossoms. The form-fitting bodice had three rows of shirring caught together in a V at the neckline with a clasp of wax orange blossoms. Sleeves of the gown were short and puffed, and there were matching elbow-length mittens to complete the ensemble.

The bride's veil, fastened to a Juliet cap, designed with miniature orange blossoms, also was of white tulle and formed three layers, 10 feet, 6 feet and 3 feet, respectively, edged with a silver thread.

The day had only one blemish. Just as the wedding party was leaving the church, a severe thunderstorm broke, and rain, whipped by a high wind, drenched the bridesmaid's gowns and delayed the procession to Owls Nest.

Sun Bright in Morning.

This morning the sun looked as if it would shine all day. The roads threading through Owl's Nest (the road signs carry an apostrophe) and winding around the 78-year-old church 4 miles away were guarded by 300 armed soldiers of the First Regiment, Fort duPont, Delaware City. Each of these, turned out in crisp khaki and white gloves, shouldered a rifle and watched the roads tensely. Also scattered along the road was a corps of Wilmington State police, and later on in the afternoon, the Secret Service.

Around noon, taxicabs, buses and trucks continuously sped out of Wilmington toward Owl's Nest, bearing guests for luncheon, and members of the duPont family attending to last-minute arrangements. Shortly after noon the President's train pulled into the Shields Lumber Co. siding near Greenville, and members of the President's party, flanked by the Secret Service, drove to Mr. and Mrs. Porter Schutt's home for luncheon.

Dress on Train.

Later they returned to the train to dress for the wedding and not long before the time set for the ceremony arrived at the quaint little church selected as the site of the most publicized and most elaborate simple wedding ever to take place in America.

For almost a century Christ Church in Christiana Hundred has been the scene for duPont family marriages and christenings, but the small, spired landmark was never so expensively decorated as it was today.

An hour before the ceremony the sun still was shining while guests poured into the church as if seats were to be occupied on a first-come, first-serve basis. Dr. Charles M. Courboin, Belgian-born American organist, was the star of this interval as he gave a concert of classical music. This was the second of Dr. Courboin's performances at which a President of the United States has been present, the artist having played before President Coolidge more than a decade ago. This time, however, a Chief Executive was in his concert audience very briefly, arriving only five minutes before time for the wedding to begin.

An hour before the first guest had arrived at 3:45 o'clock Mrs. Edward J. MacMullan, who planned the wedding, was there in lonely splendor, her auburn hair glinting beneath a broad-brimmed black hat. Her frock of black sheer was short and brightened with a bouquet of orchids at the waist.

Meanwhile, up at Owls Nest an hour and a half before the wedding, young Franklin grew impatient "I can't stand this sticking around," he said. "I'm going for a swim." And so he did—in the pool at Owls Nest.

Miles away the bridal parties were converging on the church.

To the processional music from "Lohengrin," the bridal party moved down the aisle as the ceremony got under way. First came the ushers two by two; then the bridesmaids two by two, followed by the matron of honor, then the maid of honor, and finally the bride.

Moving up the aisle to meet the bridegroom, who entered with the best man, John Roosevelt, from the pastor's study at the left of the sanctuary, the bride was escorted by her father. She carried a small prayer book of antique carved ivory, to which was fastened sprays of dove orchids and a shower of stephanotis and lilies of the valley.

The prayer book was "the something old" in the bride's ensemble. It was published by French printers in 1889. "The something blue" was the star sapphire bracelet set in a platinum backing, made especially for her and given to her by the bridegroom.

In Franklin Roosevelt's pocket was the gift from his bride, an open-faced watch bearing the simple inscription, "To F. D. R., from E. duP., June 30, 1937."

The Rev. Frederick T. Ashton, regular pastor of Christ Church, opened the ceremony. He has been pastor for the duPont family since the bride was three years old, and he was a childhood friend of President Roosevelt. The Rev. Mr. Ashton's late father, the Rev. Amos T. Ashton, was from 1891 to 1911 rector of Hyde Park Church, which the Roosevelts have attended for many years. He now lives in the house where Ethel duPont was born 21 years ago.

Tradition in Rites.

The Rev. Mr. Peabody, headmaster of Groton School, completed the ceremony. His participation in the event also bore the stamp of tradition. He was at Groton when each of the four Roosevelt boys prepared for college, and he officiated at the weddings of both James and Elliott Roosevelt as well as that of the President.

"I now pronounce you man and wife, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

And the country's foremost couple, the pair that defied the far-flung economic and political differences of their families, were one.

Word for word the Protestant Episcopal ceremony was used, with the word "obey" omitted. It has not been included in exchange of vows at Christ Church for eight years, so today the bride repeated only the words, "To love, honor and cherish."

While the bridegroom voiced the vow, "With this ring I thee wed," the President's family, close friends and members of the Cabinet, stood side by side and shoulder to shoulder with members of a top-rung family of financiers who had done their best to keep the bridegroom's father out of the White House. But swords were sheathed and differences apparently forgotten as the house of Roosevelt and the house of duPont—sworn enemies in the past—adopted friendly attitudes while they stood beneath the same roof and heard the droning voice of the Rev. Mr. Peabody as he continued, "that ye may so live together in this life, that in the world to come ye may have life everlasting . . ."

All the duPonts who have not gone abroad were present to bury political hatchets. As one duPont dowager expressed it, "I don't like the Roosevelts, and I'm not going to pretend I do—not even for Ethel."

But, anyway, there were more duPonts there than attended the famous Liberty League dinner. Some of the most prominent ones present included Lammot duPont, president of the firm of E. I. duPont de Nemours, and Mrs. duPont; Irenee duPont, vice president of the firm and active Liberty Leaguer, and his wife; A. Felix duPont, treasurer of the firm, and his wife, and dozens of others bearing the name.

Roosevelt Party.

Members of the President's party included Hall Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Miss Esther Lape, Miss Nancy Cook, Miss Marion Dickerman, Maj. Henry Hooker, M. H. McIntyre, Steve Early, Miss M. A. Le Hand, Capt. and Mrs. Bastedo, Col. and Mrs. E. W. Watson, Dr. and Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. Malvina T. Scheider, Miss Grace Tully, Miss Margaret Durand, H. M. Kannee, Miss Roberta Barrows, E. W. Smithers and members of the Secret Service.

Among the Cabinet members and their wives who attended the wedding and reception were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull; the Secretary of the Treasury, who met Mrs. Morgenthau and their three children here; the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper; Attorney General Homer F. Cummings; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley.

Among other guests at the church were Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, in black and white chiffon; Representative Caroline O'Day, in black sheer, and her daughter, Miss Elia O'Day; Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt, in powder blue crepe with a short jacket and a cream felt hat; Miss Laura Delano, in black organdy over print; Mrs. Ellen Roosevelt, in a dark red and white print; Mr. and Mrs. Morris K. Brownell, jr.—she in dubonnet and white short print; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Forbes, Admiral and Mrs. Cary E. Grayson, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Alsop, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Baruch, Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall Bullitt, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest duPont.

Mother Wears Rose Chiffon.

Also Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Blaise de Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Morgan, Mrs. Robert C. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. A. Drexel Paul, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Clark and Eugene duPont, jr.

Mrs. Roosevelt, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in white chiffon printed in flowers of mixed colors, and a broad-brimmed hat trimmed with blossoms of matching hues.

Bridesmaids' Dresses.

Mrs. Alfred B. Hallowell, Miss Barbara Cushing, Miss Harriet Jackson, Mrs. C. Porter Schutt, Mrs. James P. Polk and Mrs. Thomas Le Boutillier 3d—the six bridesmaids—carried bouquets similar to the maid of honor's.

The bridal attendants, dressed alike in floating gowns of mousseline de soie over white taffeta, had natural sprays of maidenhair fern fastened to the taffeta. Their frocks were fashioned with bolero jackets and short puffed sleeves. Girdles of the same material completed the gowns. Their soft, wide-brimmed hats were trimmed with green or yellow ribbon streamers and wreaths of white violets.

Mrs. John Boettiger, matron of honor, and Miss Aimee duPont, maid of honor, carried oblong bouquets of single blossoms arranged of hortensia maculata, nizza levkoja, stephanotis and primulus with a soft tinge of wistaria blue and hydrangea purple.

These botanical names completely stumped a Wilmington florist yesterday morning, who wondered why the blossoms "weren't called by more familiar names, since the wedding is supposed to be such an unpretentious affair."

Flowers at Pew Ends.

Across the continent had come 2,000 stems of Madagascar jasmine to scent the atmosphere. This white, waxy star-shaped blossom, said to have been the favorite flower of Edward VII, was scattered with an artist's hand through the bouquets of peonies and lilies.

In the center aisle, on ends of alternate pews, were clusters of peonies and lilies bound with white satin ribbon. The altar was banked with cibodium ferns and plants and filled in with peonies, while clusters of lilies flanked the chancel.

The choir stall, occupied by duPont household retainers, also was set off with palms and ferns. A white satin runner was laid from the church door to the altar rail, and held with a huge white satin cushion, upon which the couple kneeled to receive the benediction.

Traffic Snarled.

Th storm broke just as the bridal party started out of the church.

Flashes of lightning and bursts of thunder punctuated the ride, and the downpour snarled traffic until cars were halted for a time in a long line stretching almost all the way from Christiana Hundred to Owls Nest.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple, those who were invited to the church and more than 700 others went to Owls Nest, the duPont estate, for a reception.

The reception bower, banked high with peonies and lilies, was on the grounds at the rear of the Tudor-style house, which overlooks a broad sweep of farming country. The huge tent erected on the grounds of Owls Nest, "in case it rains," was very much needed.

Down to the finest detail plans had been worked out to facilitate parking, and three dozen special "parking engineers" were on hand to help in the emergency.

Despite the storm that caused the reception to be moved indoors, 1,000 guests appeared at Owls Nest. The receiving line formed in the oak-paneled living room, which was cozy with bright curtains and lined with book shelves. Guests were met by a butler, who gravely asked their names and then passed them on to Mrs. duPont, who seemed to be having the time of her life. Next in line was the President, who was also in one of his gayest moods. Guests were presented to him by Eugene duPont, who stood at the left.

Also in the receiving line were Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the bridal party. The bride, radiant and talkative, kept a tight grip on her husband's arm and greeted each person as if she had been waiting all afternoon to see him.

"I'm so happy, so happy," she repeated incessantly.

Franklin beamed. "That goes for me, too," he said, again and again.

"And where are you going on your honeymoon?" he was asked.

"That's one thing I won't tell," he answered with a smile that was broader than ever.

Two toasts were proposed. The first, by the President, was to the bride. The second, by his son, to whom the President handed his glass of champagne, was "to Mother."

Mrs. Roosevelt smiled at her handsome son. As the toast was offered, the bride and bridegroom turned to Mrs. Roosevelt, who was standing in the reception line next to the bride's mother.

"Ethel was beautiful coming down the aisle, wasn't she?" said duPont of his daughter. "You know, she hesitated a little. I said to her, Come, dear, Franklin's waiting, then she walked straight along bravely."

Throughout the day President and Mrs. Roosevelt kept themselves in the background. On several occasions there were cheers, and at Owls Nest President Roosevelt distinctly was the life of the party. Guests meeting each other were heard to say:

"Have you met the President—what do you think of him?"

40 at Bridal Table.

The bridal table, which was set in the spacious diningroom, accommodated 40 persons, including the bridal party. It was decorated with seven silver centerpieces, filled with bouvardia, lilies-of-the-valley and maidens-hair fern.

At 9 o'clock the last car heading toward Owls Nest from the church rolled into the grounds. Some guests who had been delayed in the long line of automobiles for hours were grumpy when they arrived, and some were impatient at the "slow service" after they got there. One man mentioned he "had to wait 20 minutes for a glass of champagne."

But on the whole the reception was highly successful despite the weather. All the old traditions were observed, from the cutting of the bride's two-tiered cake to the scramble for her bouquet when she tossed it across the wrought-iron balustrade as she went up to change into her traveling costume.

First Lady Leaves Early.

Long before that, Mrs. Roosevelt had left the party in order to make her weekly broadcast from a station in Wilmington. But the party went on and on, even after the newlyweds had slipped away. From 7:30 o'clock until late in the evening Meyer Davis' Orchestra played while younger guests danced and older ones looked on. Drinks of any kind or brand could be had for the asking, and a supper menu that included everything from soup to chicken was served from 8 o'clock on.

The Roosevelt train pulled out of Wilmington for Hyde Park at 12:32 a. m.

In two large rooms and an upstairs hall, white-draped tables held tonight the thousands of gifts.

One room was entirely devoted to silver and glassware. A second room held the gifts in colors—china, linen, pictures, spreads, rare pottery.

Gift of the President.

In the center of one table in the silver-and-glass room was a large chest of flat silver given by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Just in front was a nest of five silver service platters sent by the Cabinet.

Alongside stood eight tall silver candlesticks sent by the ushers. Across the room stood one of the gifts of the bride's mother, an engraved silver tea and coffee service with a large matching tray.

The copper plates from which their wedding invitations were made were transformed into gifts—one into a cigarette box and the other into a matching tray. The lettering of the invitations still was visible on both articles.

The bridal couple left the duPont home at 11:35 o'clock (Eastern standard time). Instead of slipping quietly out a back way, as it had been freely predicted they would, they walked out through a crowd of friends and reception guests who, with much shouting and many cries of "good-by," showered them with rice.

A little later a long limousine with a motorcycle escort pulled out of the duPont grounds by the back road and skimmed down the highway from Greenville. United States soldiers and Wilmington police went into action and blocked off the road. Eugene duPont's prophecy, "It will be impossible to trail them," had come true.

The bride's going-away costume was a frock of beige and white print crepe, with plain beige introduced in the pleating of the skirt and the waist-length cape. An off-the-face straw hat completed the costume.

The destination of the newlyweds was unannounced, but is generally believed they have planned a European trip that will last about two months. Eventually they will set up housekeeping in a two-story Colonial cottage in Charlottesville, Va.—recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lyon Polk, jr., of New York—while Franklin attends the law school of the University of Virginia.

"New Faces" Is A Fast-Moving Musical Romp

Musical Strikes New Note in Backstage Stories at RKO-Keith's.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Judging from the almost continuous roar of laughter that filled RKO-Keith's Theater at the first afternoon performance yesterday, RKO-Radio has hit upon an eminently successful novelty in its musical production of "New Faces of 1937."

It is the comedy vein that is stressed throughout, although many catchy song numbers are introduced. A majority of these have been staged effectively, if not too well lighted, but one or two give the impression of being just a little tawdry. However, this is a comparatively minor matter since the object of the producers seems to have been not to evolve an overwhelming spectacle, but really to afford opportunities for a surprisingly large number of unknowns to show their wares. This they do with a youthful spontaneity and pep that keep "New Faces of 1937" romping along at high speed for the greater part of its length.

The burden of carrying the "plot," naturally, rests upon the shoulders of the veterans in the cast—Joe Penner, Milton Berle, Parkayakarkas, Jerome Cowan, Bert Gordon, Richard Lane, Dewey Robinson and the rest. The plot, by reason of the nature of the experiment that is being made in this subject, is a backstage story and concerns itself with the production of a revue called "New Faces," for which many auditions and tryouts are held.

Given Novel Twist.

A new twist has been given this ancient formula in the present instance by making the producer in the play a clever swindler who operates on a new theory of how to get rich quick. He sells 85 per cent of each of his productions to four different backers, each unknown to the others. He uses the money of one to put on the show, keeps the money of the other three for himself and then bends every effort to the simple task of fabricating a colossal "flop" so that no accounting will be called for. It works successfully up to a certain point. Then he makes a hasty exit in the general direction of South America and the youngsters put on their own show and score a triumph.

With Joe Penner as an ambitious amateur actor, Milton Berle as one of the backers, who inherits the job of production manager when Robert Hunt, played by Jerome Cowan, decides to call it a day one jump ahead of the cops; Parkayakarkas as a theatrical agent, who roams about through the entire proceedings, and Harriet Hilliard as the featured singer who finally pulls "New Faces" out of the fire, there are laughs enough generated to do fair justice to three ordinary musicals.

Berle Is an Actor.

Those who think of Milton Berle only as a comic monologist and gagster will be amazed by the proficiency he shows in maintaining the role of Wellington Wedge in his present assignment. Young Mr. Berle turns out to be an actor of parts. His funiest scene is in the stock broker's office, where he tries to recoup his waning fortune. It is played with Richard Lane, who bolsters it no little with some splendid straight work as the broker, who deals in anything from stocks to sweepstakes tickets, bets on the horses and punch-boards.

Penner has a terrific time from beginning to end trying to get into the theater from which he is fired every time he sets foot in the stage door. He has a Shakespearean scene with the stage doorman that is one of the funniest bits in the show and finally, to escape being beaten up, finds himself on stage and goes into his familiar routine of crazy songs and hat-bouncing dances.

The "new faces," of course, must be seen to be known. They include Lowe, Hite and Stanley, Derry Dean, Seven Loria Brothers, Ann Miller, a tap dancer of the first water; the Four Playboys, Camille Scray, the Brian Sisters, Eddie Rio and Brothers, Catherine Brent, the Three Chocolateers, Dorothy Roberts and Rene Stone and six showgirls of statuesque beauty and grace.

The song numbers range from rhumbas to ballads, and the piece ends on a syncopated note with "Peckin'," a pretentious number that brings the goings-on to an end.

The Pathe News and Scrappy cartoon comedy, "Scrappy's Music Lessons," are the only auxiliaries of a feature that is heavily loaded with fast-moving and hilarious entertainment.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 30.—Settin' Around (RKO and Columbia): In both of these studios I talked with production chiefs and heard heart-broken wails about current shortage of young leading men with box-office names. At Columbia, especially, the situation is "colossal" for the Cohn Brothers make a policy of borrowing players from other studios instead of carrying a contract list. Just now, it is about as easy to borrow a popular leading man as it would be to borrow an electric fan from a Death Valley dweller in July.

JOE PENNER.

Of course, these troubled executive mourners have no one to blame but themselves. They have such an eye for the sex that they spend all their money and effort recruiting glamorous ladies with appealing contours, and neglect the lads who knock at the studio gates until, suddenly, they find themselves on the spot. About once every five years, Hollywood wakes up and launches a frenzied search for male prospects. Apparently the hour has struck again, so if you are a young, personable and ambitious "he," now is the time to seize opportunity by its well-known horns.

Notwithstanding the Valentinos, Gables and Taylors, the mainstay of movies is the woman star. Hollywood signs two Jills for every Jack. And in order to present a new glamour girl, it is necessary to give her a leading man whose name is well enough known to draw business but not so well known that he will overshadow her. There are enough top-notch male stars and too many unknown bit boys—the crying need is for in-betweeners. Personally, if I were an actor, I would like to be an in-betweener. Stars may come and stars may go, but they go on forever.

At RKO, on the "Life of the party" set—which was just one degree cooler than an oven—I found a disgruntled Joe Penner playing in the final scenes. No other member of the large featured cast was in evidence, and I asked him how come. I thought for a minute he was going to cry on my shoulder. "I'm the fall guy," he sadly explained. "Harriet Hilliard hadn't seen her baby for four months and Gene Raymond had a date with Jeanette MacDonald for the seventeenth of June. And the director was so touchy that he shot all their scenes first so they could get away, and postponed mine. 'Joe, old boy,' he said, 'You're not a mother and it's been years since you were a bridegroom. This is your chance to be a hero!'"

Watched Ginger Rogers and Katharine Hepburn working in "Stage Door"—and working very amiably in spite of all the catty prophesies that their friendship could not survive the ordeal of co-starring together. For months Hollywood has been wondering which one would get "top-billing." That is settled now in Ginger's favor and I gave her mock congratulations on a distinction which would be a life-or-death matter to most people in this fame-mad village. "I don't care where they put my name," Ginger retorted, "so long as I get a good role!"

Lunching in the RKO cafe, Preston Foster stopped at my table for a chat. Said he had interrupted a cruise on his yacht to keep a date with his singing teacher—and that reminded me that you are going to hear his barytone in his next picture. And you Foster fans need not feel chagrined about being ignorant of his vocal ability—the executives of this studio where he has worked for three years were just as ignorant until one of them happened to hear him at a private party. As a matter of fact, Preston used to sing in opera.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

AN "INAUGURATION DINNER" is planned by the officers and board of governors of the North Carolina Society tonight on the roof of the Army and Navy Club. It is a get-acquainted meeting for the new official staff of the organization, which has the distinction of being the largest State society in the Capital. Lieut. Comdr. O. C. Foote, U. S. N., who is being succeeded as president by Mr. Giles Yoemans Newton, took over the leadership of the group back in 1934. There was a deficit in the treasury when he came into office but by the end of the year there was $1,500 in the sinking fund and about $500 in the bank for current expenses. He started off the season with a meeting in honor of the Governor and a "governor's night" has been an annual occasion ever since. The meetings are regularly attended by from 600 to 1,000 members.

Lieut. Comdr. Foote seems to have a knack for putting over big parties. He was chairman of the dinner given a few weeks ago by the Southern Society in honor of Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania at which 800 were present. Robert H. McNeill, president of the Southern Society, by the way, is also a North Carolinian and a former president of the State Society—so maybe it's just a good old North Carolina custom to have fine crowds turn out for parties.

CLUB WOMEN down in Oklahoma City have missed one of their most active members this season while Mrs. Robert P. Hill, wife of Representative Hill, has been here in Washington with her husband.

Mrs. Hill is vice president of the Hospitality Club (an office from which the members refused to release her, although she was to be away); a member of the Big Sisters, the Ladies' Music Club, the MacDowell-Allied Arts Club, to whose board she belonged; two bridge clubs, thrown in for good measure; the Women's Jeffersonian Club of which she was for years the vice president, and the Auxiliary of the State District Judges Association, of which she is past president.

The Hospitality Club, with 1,000 members, is the largest women's civic group in the Southwest. It gives aid to orphans homes, a home for crippled children; the children's hospital and many other such institutions. It also landscaped the grounds of the county poor farm.

One of its annual functions is the Christmas party for the orphans of Oklahoma City, given at one of the large theaters. Last Christmas, nearly 2,000 children were there and received gifts of toys, candy and clothing, with Representative Hill acting as master of ceremonies. Down there, however, he is known more familiarly as "Judge" having been on the bench for many years.

• • • •

THERE'S A QUAINT custom among the clubwomen of Oklahoma City, that of exchanging favorite recipes, for which Mrs. Hill is really responsible. She frequently gave her friends copies of recipes for cakes and other delicacies they had enjoyed and inquired about at her parties. On Valentine's Day she would fix them up on little red hearts; on St. Patrick's Day, in the shape of little green scrolls and with appropriate decoratoins at other special seasons. On one occasion, when the circle of the church to which she belongs, was meeting, one of the members asked why she didn't sell the recipes and give the proceeds to the circle's fund. She did so and the idea grew. Now, at nearly every meeting of such a group, members bring along a few copies of favorite recipes and there is a merry exchange of them, all to the good of the treasury.

No, sir, the resourceful mother of the family hears of friends going back home with little or no baggage and sends a trunk along. She started in May and expects to have them all at their destination before the middle of July.

Chinese Minister of Finance Is Entertained by Dr. Wang

Twin Oaks, Ambassador's Residence, Is Scene of Brilliant Party; Inclement Weather Keeps Distinguished Guests Indoors All Afternoon.

Twin Oaks, the new residence of the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Chengting Wang, easily adapted itself yesterday to the change from a garden party to an indoor reception in honor of the Chinese Minister of Finance, Dr. H. H. Kung, a much-feted visitor in Washington.

Weather did not permit use of the beautiful garden, but guests gathered within the house where they were received by the Ambassador, his daughter, Miss Yoeh Wang, Dr. Kung and the Ambassador's sister-in-law, Mrs. C. H. Wang.

Guests, however, did go out to the veranda where Mrs. Ing, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, and Dr. Kung amused them with wagers on possibilities of a clear sky. The honor guest took the jinx upon himself by remarking that it never failed to rain when he was a guest at garden parties in Shanghai.

Miss Wang's modernized version of Chinese dress was of beige brocade trimmed with black bands. Completing the ensemble were the black velvet jacket and black sandals. Mrs. Wang had chosen a pale blue brocade made with the same long lines and side slitted skirt.

The costumes of the Chinese women infused the scene with an Oriental air. Among the hostesses was the younger daughter of the Ambassador, Miss An-Fu Wang, who was busily engaged in caring for the guests. She wore a gown of pale pink embroidered with small roses. Both she and her sister wore corsages of orchids. Their only jewelry consisted of earrings.

An interesting guest was Dr. Masujima, the internationally famous Japanese lawyer, who is traveling in the United States. He arrived with the Japanese Ambassador, Hirosi Saito. Attired in a gray kimono, Dr. Masujima's concession to American dress was a straw hat.

Some of the guests enjoyed reminiscences of their own trips to China. Among them was Mrs. George Pettengill, who once made her home in that country for five years. She is returning to Peking on August 1 to attend a house party that will last two months. Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol also were centers of animated groups.

Three picturesque Chinese girls were Miss Sophie Han and Miss Mollie Sab, a Vassar student, who came with their hostess, Miss Lois Ing, daughter of the Counselor of the Embassy and Mrs. Ing.

Other guests were the Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najero; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britton, the Minister of Uruguay, Mr. J. Richling; the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted; Mrs. Hamilton Lewis and the Charge d'Affaires of Honduras and Mme. Caceres.

AMERICAN GOLFERS BEAT BRITISH, 8-4, RETAIN RYDER CUP

22,000 SEE FERRELL AND NATS WIN, 6-4, OVER SOX

Victors Win Five Singles In the Rain

Dudley Victory Clinches Match; Ralph Guldahl Routs Alf Padgham.

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Southport, England, June 30.—The United States Ryder Cup team today achieved the goal of an eight-year-long quest when the hand-picked squad of American professional golfers scored the first United States victory on British soil, by 8 points to 4, and thus retained the international trophy for at least two more years.

Leading 2½ to 1½ after yesterday's Scotch foursomes, the invaders won five singles matches, tied another and lost 2 today.

Thus the Americans rounded out, finally, their conquest of all of Great Britain's golf trophies for men's competition. Every other British prize had fallen previously into American hands at one time or another, but never previously had United States players been able to capture the Ryder Cup on this side of the Atlantic.

Turn on Pressure.

As it turned out, the invaders did not need that one-point margin they picked up in yesterday's foursomes. In the singles, played under a drenching rain that was driven across the seaside sand dunes of the Southport and Ainsdale course by a high wind, the boys turned on the pressure in the last 18 holes to write one of the most dramatic stories in international golf history.

Appropriately enough, it remained for Gene Sarazen, who has played in every cup match, including the two the Americans lost in Great Britain in 1929 and 1933, to assure the team of retaining the trophy by scoring a sterling one-up victory over Percy Alliss.

Three down at the end of 24 holes and still three down after birdieing the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh, doughty little Gene finally went out front for good on the short thirty-third. There his tee shot hit a spectator and stayed on the green, thus giving Sarazen a chance to hole a 24-foot putt for the deuce, which won the match.

Dudley Clinches Match.

While Sarazen's triumph clinched the cup—when Gene came in the winner, it brought the score to 6 to 4, with only two matches still on the course—it was another veteran, Ed Dudley, who made sure of victory. Dudley's 2 and 1 defeat of Alf Perry, British open champion two years ago, made it 7 to 4 and killed the last home hope of tying the score.

Most decisive victor of the day was towering, slope shouldered Ralph Guldahl, winner of the United States open crown two and a half weeks ago, and today conqueror by an 8 and 7 score of Alf Padgham, the British open ruler. Joining him, Sarazen and Dudley as winners were Slammin' Sam Snead, who routed Richard Burton, 5 and 4, in his international debut, and lanky Henry Picard, with a 2 and 1 defeat of Arthur Lacey.

Denny Shute, two-time U. S. P. G. A. champion, accounted for the other half-point by finishing his 36-hole tour of duty all even with young Sam King, a former gamekeeper from Kent. The British winners were Henry Cotton, who made up for his poor showing in the foursomes by whipping 1936 American Open Champion Tony Manero, 5 and 3, and brilliant young David Rees, Welsh assistant pro, who topped Byron Nelson, 3 and 1.

Have No Excuses.

The British had no excuses to offer for their defeat but took it graciously and had nothing but praise for their conquerors.

"Surely this must dispel the notion that the Americans cannot play well under our weather conditions," said Charles A. Whitcombe, captain of the losing squad.

Walter Hagen, non-playing American leader who, on the eve of the matches, predicted the exact score by which his boys would win, accepted the cup from Lord Wardington, vice president of the British P. G. A., on the clubhouse veranda before the 12,000 spectators who had watched the great battle.

Chicago Tops Cardinals, 9-4

St. Louis, June 30 (AP).—Behind a parade of pitchers, the Chicago Cubs retained their hold on first place in the National League today, defeating the third-place St. Louis Cardinals again, 9 to 4. A defeat would have given the league lead to the New York Giants, who won over Philadelphia, 7 to 2.

A's Get One Hit, Lose to Gomez, 5-1

Southpaw Exhibits Best Form; Johnson Gets Tenth Home Run.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 30.—Lefty Gomez pitched his best game in two years today and one of the best of his career, handcuffing the Athletics with one hit in hurling the New York Yankees to a 5-to-1 victory.

In eight of the nine innings, El Goofy put the A's down one-two-three. In the fifth, Bob Johnson, first man up, accounted for the only Athletics's hit and run with his tenth homer of the year. Gomez put the next two men out, then walked a pair, and fanned the next batsman. Otherwise, he was untouchable during the day.

He fanned seven altogether and was never in any danger, since there were never men on base, except in the fifth. His form today made him a distinct threat in next week's All-Star game.

The Yanks collected two runs in the first off Bud Thomas and then in the eighth belted him out and wound up their scoring off Lynn (Line-Drive) Nelson. Setting the pace was Bill Dickey, with a double and two singles.

Bridges Hurls Detroit To 4-1 Win Over Sox

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Tommy Bridges' five-hit pitching, backed up by Hank Greenberg's seventeenth home run of the season and a timely triple by Billy Rogell, gave the Detroit Tigers a 4-to-1 victory over Chicago today and ended the home club's winning streak at seven games.

The Tiger curve-ball artist was seldom in trouble as he worked smoothly to his ninth victory of the season. The only White Sox run was scored in the third by Luke Sewell, who walked and made his way home on consecutive singles by Mike Kreevich and Dixie Walker.

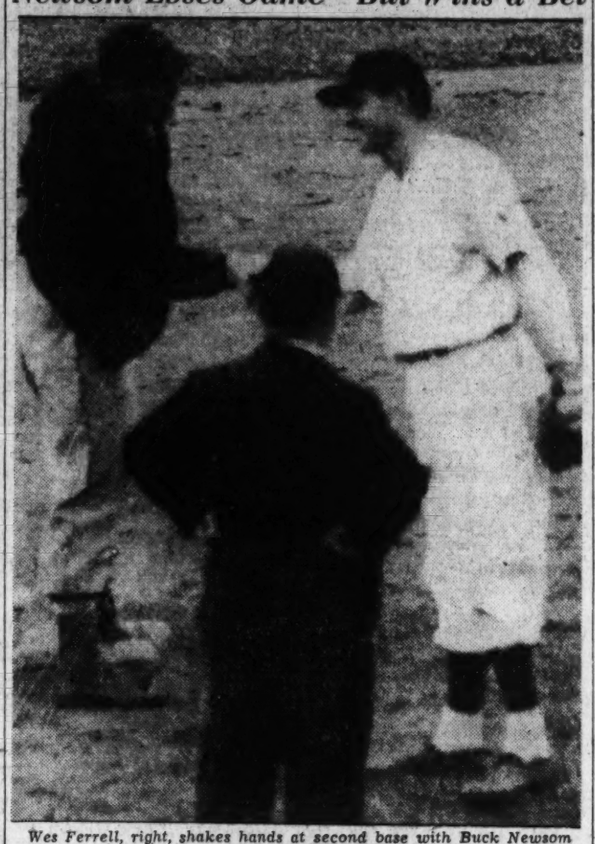
Newsom Loses Game—But Wins a Bet



Wes Ferrell, right, shakes hands at second base with Buck Newsom in the fifth inning of yesterday's game after Buck hit a two-bagger. They made a pregame wager that they would shake the hand of the first one to make a hit off the other.

Budge, Von Cramm Wimbledon Finalists

Californian Drops Set to Frank Parker Before Whipping Davis Cup Mate, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-1; German Outlasts Austin, 8-6, 6-3, 12-14, 6-1.

By John Martin.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Wimbledon, England, June 30 (AP).—Red-headed Don Budge, America's top-ranking tennis ace, met stubborn resistance from an unexpected quarter today, but smashed his way into the final round of the all-England championships along with Germany's Baron Gottfried von Cramm.

Budge, top-heavy choice for the title relinquished by Fred Perry, shuttled his Davis Cup team-mate, Frankie Parker, to the sidelines but only after yielding the first set of his current foreign campaign. Budge finally won after a bitter duel, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6—1, to qualify for Friday's championship round.

Von Cramm meanwhile, outlasted frail Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, England's Davis Cup hope, in the other semi-final, 8—6, 6—3, 12—14, 6—1, and reached the final round for the second year in a row. He was soundly beaten last year by Perry, now a professional.

Uses Chop Stroke.

Baffling Budge for a time with an attack built around judicious use of the chop-stroke, Parker not only amazed the capacity crowd of 15,000 jamming Wimbledon's famed center court, but projected his chances of battling Bryan Grant for the second singles berth on America's Davis Cup team. The Americans meet either Germany or Czechoslovakia in the interzone finals.

Budge, who had looked invincible in the recent Queen's Club tournament and in every one of his matches in the current championships, did not appear so during the early stages of his match with Parker. In the face of the Milwaukee youngster's cleverly masked offensive, Budge was erratic, netting frequently or overdriving the baseline with his hot smashes.

After dropping the first set, Budge settled down to work in earnest. He won the next three sets, but only in the final did the favorite have things his own way. Throughout the second and third sets Parker fought tooth and nail and the issue always was in doubt. In the final set, however, Budge finally got his sizzling first service working and swept his rival off the court.

Parker Wins Fans.

From the standpoint of the gallery, Budge still was a flashy eye-ful, but Parker punctured the traditional British reserve with his fine play. The roars of applause that greeted his successful shots and the sighs that followed when one of his chop strokes missed the baseline target indicated clearly where the gallery's sympathies lay.

The gallery of 15,000 Britons shattered precedent by missing the traditional tea and crumpets to cheer Austin's gallant fight against Von Cramm.

The tightly wedged spectators grumbled, but none deserted the stands at teatime as Austin and Von Cramm battled one hour and 20 minutes in the marathon third set alone and a total of two and a half hours all told.

Von Cramm got the jump on the British stylist in the first set after the first ten games had been evenly divided and finally won out in the fourteenth game by cracking Austin's service. The German then swept through the second set with the loss of only three games. Austin, however, braced for one supreme effort and took the 26-game third set, marked by a series of deuced games, after some of the best tennis Wimbledon ever has seen.

That effort, however, took all the slender Austin's stamina and he was an easy victim of Von Cramm's attack in the fourth set.

Nats Score Three Runs in Eighth to Overcome 4-3 Lead.

By Shirley Povich.

The impish grin and one-run lead of Buck Newsom disappeared simultaneously and with great suddenness in the eighth inning at Griffith Stadium yesterday as the Nats reared up and beat the Red Sox, 6 to 4.

With a laugh on his face and encouraging the boos of the largest week-day crowd in modern Griffith Stadium history, big Newsom had been salting the wounds of the trailing Nats for the best part of seven innings—and then came that eighth.

And it was Wes Ferrell, Newsom's pitching foe, who reaped the last measure of ignominy on Newsom with the hit that won the ball game—a single to centerfield that drove in the tying run, drove in the winning run and drove the arrogant smile from Newsom's face.

It was a swell ball game—this battle of Newsom vs. Ferrell, the two pitchers who had exchanged uniforms three weeks ago in the Washington-Boston trade and besides the spectacular dueling it presented it produced also the greatest week-day crowd in years—22,000 fans, including 8,000 Boy Scouts from the Jamboree grounds.

Newsom Booed.

And it produced, too, the greatest prolonged chorus of boos ever heard at Griffith Stadium—sometimes vicious, sometimes good natured—as the Washington fans leaped upon Newsom's every mistake, his every misfortune.

Even as he walked out on the field and while his name was announced among the batteries, Newsom heard the salvo of boos, which persisted throughout the nine innings. But the big, boastful right-hander was enjoying it immensely until that eighth—bowing to the throng, jokingly thumbing his nose at Washington players and taking it all with good grace.

And he was in his element, too, in that fifth inning when he, personally, accounted for a Red Sox run with a terrific two-bagger that hit the rail atop the left-field bleachers fence and lacked only a foot of being a home run. Because he stopped proceedings then to collect a bet.

With some amazement, the 22,000 saw Wes Ferrell walk out of the pitcher's box, amble toward second base and extend his hand to Newsom with a smile. It was the payoff on their pregame wager that they would shake hands with the first one of 'em that made a hit yesterday. Thunderous applause greeted the demonstration.

But to get to the nub of the ball game, the Nats were operating under a serious 4-3 deficit when that eighth inning arrived. They had made only four hits off Newsom

Charles Town Feature Taken by Red Label

Five-Year-Old Mare Steps Fast Over Muddy Track to Win, and Pays $5; Sammy Palumbo Rides Winner in Duel With Sylvia G.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—W. G. Townsend's Red Label made it six straight at the Charles Town Jockey Club grounds here this afternoon.

The brown 5-year-old mare started her string of victories June 4 and has since mowed down all kinds of opposition with regularity. Track conditions seem to mean little nor does weight bother. She has won three over heavy racing strips as prevailed today, two over fast tracks and one on a good course.

Many doubted her ability to carry 120 pounds and whip four clever rivals today, but those in the crowd of 4,500, who strung along with her chances, were rewarded with the generous pay-off of $5.

Sammy Palumbo rode a waiting race on the winner and came from far back to nab Mrs. A. A. Gray's Sylvia G 20 yards out and win by three parts of a length. C. E. George's Highland Song, the early pace-setter, wilted badly and finished third four lengths back.

Warren E. Peake's Scold, paying $16.20, beat Mrs. A. White's Never Cease by three lengths to win the 4½-furlong opener after leading every step of the way. Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Schley Nurse, coupled with G. G. Waugh, jr.s, Schley Buck, the betting choice, finished third.

The Ohio contingent scored their second win of the meeting when Mrs. E. B. Shipp's Morley Firth won the 4½-furlong race by two and a half lengths. R. V. Parrish's Wise Revue was second and M. J. Daly's Dolly Tour third. The backers of the winner, which was the choice and paid $5.40, had several anxious minutes before the stewards hung out the official sign. Morley Firth, ridden by P. Martinez, cut over sharply on Johnny Bane, leaving his backstretch and caused P. Castanova to pull up. The foul was not allowed.

J. L. Armstrong's Crossed Wires came along to score a lucky victory in the second and complete the double, which paid $65.40. Crossed Wires beat the gate by two lengths and then just lasted to beat O. S. Bloom's Gagne by a length in the sprint over the Charles Town course. Leon Garrett rode the winner in the fortunate score and the victor paid $14.20.

Billy Shea and Farrell Tie for Middle-Atlantic Junior Links Crown

Down in the sweaty confines of the Red Sox locker room, the place was thick with the smell of liniment, tepid draughts from the showers hit you in the face and a grumpy lot of athletes weren't talking much. They weren't very happy about losing that ball game to the Nats yesterday.

Blustering Buck Newsom was downright mad. The big fellow who had braved, even encouraged, the boos of that big crowd in the park not long before, had lost his bluster. He was plain sore. And hurt.

"Well, I guess those wolves out there in the grandstands got their fill today," said the big fellow as he came out of the shower and manhandled the big turkish towel across his back. "They certainly gave me a great hand.

* * * *

"Seems like they've got short memories, though. You'd think I never tried to pitch for Washington when I was pitching for Washington. I guess I was some kind of a dog, huh? I gave this town some of the best ball games it ever saw and this is what happens. Oh, well——" And the big pitcher turned away to look for that other sock.

* * * *

But this morning, Buck Newsom in defeat is probably a more popular guy in Washington than he ever was in triumph; even when he was shutting out the Yankees, 1-0, in that opening game of 1936 after being knocked cold by a thrown ball in the fourth inning; or when he was pitching that superb one-hit game against Detroit, when a cheap hit jerked him off the threshold of no-hit fame.

* * * *

Even as Jack Dempsey, the slacker of 1917-18-19 when he ducked the draft lists and found refuge in a shipyard, reached the peak of his popularity after he lost the title to Gene Tunney, Buck Newsom gained more admiration as a beaten pitcher yesterday than he had been able to achieve when he was wearing a Washington uniform.

* * * *

Because the big fellow gave Washington's largest mid-week crowd in seasons a thrilling show while he was out there on the mound yesterday. His pre-game utterances and natural braggadocio were responsible for that big crowd in the first place, and he didn't fail 'em when proceedings began.

* * * *

He show-boated all over the place. He gloated like a small boy when he was ahead, and he pouted all over the premises when things went against him. He injected gobs of color into the proceedings and he made it a ball game apart, a ball game to be remembered along with the most magnificent games in Griffith Stadium history.

* * * *

Sans Newsom, it would have been just another ball game. With Newsom out there, it was a riotous affair. The big guy, who apparently forgot to grow with the rest of his generation, transformed the contest into a highly personal affair among players of both teams and the fans as well.

* * * *

With his small-boy antics Newsom fired everybody into a high state of excitement. The folks in the stands yelped for his hide when he thumbed his nose at Rick Ferrell, the Nats crept out to the very edge of their dug-out and vowed to beat him when he struck out Buddy Myer and then impishly waved him away from the plate with an "Aw, go sit down," motion of his arm.

* * * *

He had the Red Sox fighting for him, too, and it all contrived to make it a swell ball game, strikingly different from the listless affairs that happen at Griffith Stadium four days a week. And to Newsom, alone, the crowd was indebted for its thrilling afternoon.

* * * *

The guy had something on the ball, too, in those early innings before he grew just a bit weary and had to slow up in order to get his pitches across the plate. That thing he was throwing up there in the first inning when he struck out Buddy Lewis and Johnny Stone was about as visible as a needled bullet.

* * * *

Buck was glorying in his success, then. He walked back to the bench with a strut that could land him in the Harlem Follies, and he was meeting each new salvo of boos by doffing his cap in mock appreciation. Oh, he was something, I want to tell you.

* * * *

And then, kid-like, when he began to lose, he began to get mad. He yelped at the umpires, he fidgeted and he crabbed. But when that last Boston out sealed the Nats' triumph, he just stuck his chin up and walked toward the dugout with all the majesty of a guy who could take it if he had to take it.

* * * *

But down there in the dressing room after the game, the bluster was gone, as I was saying. Buck wasn't exactly whipped. He just didn't think he had been treated right by those Washington fans who used to cheer him. The big fellow was real hurt.

Score 153's In Driving Rainstorm

Shea Loses Opportunity to Win by Putting; Play-off Sunday.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hillendale C. C., Baltimore, June 30.—Billy Shea, the newly crowned Middle-Atlantic champion from Congressional, and Johnny Farrell, a bashful blond from the host club, battled the elements that included a driving rain and high wind to tie for the Middle Atlantic Junior Championship with a total of 153 here today.

Shea, the defending champion who had the title in the bag after eight holes of the afternoon round, was the victim of an unruly chipper and putter and "blew" numerous chances around the green on the final nine and forced a play-off on Sunday, July 4, at 2 p. m.

In third place a stroke behind the pace setters was Bobby Brownell, the District champion and Maryland State junior title-holder from Manor, who developed a hook that played havoc with Hillendale's woody layout and cost him 79 strokes in the morning and 75 in the afternoon, one over the limit.

Two Mistakes.

Farrell, favorite of the Baltimore contingent, played the back nine in 37 strokes each trip. The shy, 18-year-old Baltimore scholastic runner-up was apparently unbothered by the wind and rain and breezed around the final nine, making only two mistakes, one on the last hole that cost him a bogey 5.

Shea, a late starter, needed a 40 on the last nine for his second consecutive title, but he three-putted two greens, failed to get down in two from the edge of another pair and took a disastrous five on the par-three seventeenth hole, placing his tee shot in the ditch and taking a penalty stroke.

Shea played the first nine in eight 4s and a 5, 2 over par and returned in 39, three-putting the fourteenth and missing three other carpets with his second shots. He trailed Francis Ogden, of the Baltimore C. C., by a stroke at lunch.

January Conditions.

On the third nine the black-haired Georgetown student flubbed an approach shot on the ninth hole and was out in 36. It was here that the wind and rain increased and he was forced to play the back nine in January conditions.

Farrell, who knows the course better than his favorite novel, was hot with his chipper and putter in the afternoon. He missed several of the greens in regulation figures, but made up for lapses with a fine short game, styled after the host club pro and Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, Charlie Betschler.

Brownell was off to a bad start, hooking two tee shots out of bounds on the second hole. He caught the woods on the sixth and seventh and was out in 40. A 5 on the par 3 twelfth cost the Manor star a pair of strokes, but he parred the next five holes, a hooked tee shot costing him a 5 on the last hole.

Five Over Par.

Bobby was on his game on the third nine of the day, even par for eight holes, a pulled iron on the short ninth costing him a 36. He started back in championship style, 4-3-4, but a combination of the wind and several bad breaks sent him 5 over par on the next six holes, and soared his score to 75.

Jack Wade, Army and Navy, withdrew after playing the morning nine in 92 strokes. Trailing Brownell was Ogden, with a 157 total, and Wally Engle, Hillendale, with 169.

Shea will have an opportunity to monopolize the Middle Atlantic titles should he win over Farrell in the play-off on Sunday. The bid of the host club star is the strongest in major competition.

Guy Taylor (Hillendale), 43, 43—88; 43, 32—85—173.
W. W. Wagner, jr. (Baltimore C. C.), 40, 38—80; 42, 38—78—160.
Robert Goldman (Suburban), 40, 47—87; 39, 44—83—170.
Nathan Kaufman (Suburban), 38, 45—83—withdrew.
Billy Shea (Congressional), 39, 37—76; 36, 41—77—153.
Francis Ogden (Baltimore C. C.), 38, 37—75; 44, 38—82—157.
J. F. Hebb (Hillendale), 130—131—261.

Junior Golf Title Is Won by Bogart

Ralph Bogart, of Army and Navy Country Club, yesterday captured the District junior golf championship, defeating Jimmy Stevens, also of Army and Navy, 6 and 5, at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Stevens scored an upset in the semi-final round yesterday morning, eliminating the pre-tourney favorite and co-medalist with Bogart, Buddy Sharkey, 2 and 1, while Bogart trimmed Dick Meyer of Manor Club, 3 and 2.

G. U. Golfer Advances in College Play

Johnson Wins Twice to Gain Quarter-Finals; Pettijohn Ousted.

By Claire Burcky.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Oakmont, Pa., June 30.—Harvey F. Johnson, Georgetown Junior from Chevy Chase, Md., kept alive Hoya hopes for a national intercollegiate golf championship at Oakmont County Club today by winning two matches to advance to the quarter-final round.

Johnson will battle Fred Haas, jr., Louisiana State's Southern amateur champion, in an upper bracket match tomorrow. Haas was runner-up for the intercollegiate title in 1935.

The qualifying round pace setters, topped by Medalist Willie Turnesa, of Holy Cross, developed slices, hooks and putting jitters, and wound up on the sidelines.

Exactly seven of the eight low scorers in the medal play rounds, including young Bobby Jacobson, of Dartmouth, who was three shots behind Turnesa's winning 146, cooled off and took the long count.

William Barclay, Michigan, put the skids under the medalist, defeating Turnesa 1 up in the second round as Stanley Holditch, Georgia Tech's bespectacled star, wheeled out Jacobson after 21 holes.

Johnson turned back Burt Parker, Princeton, 2 and 1, and then sidetracked the Big Ten Conference champion, Sid Richardson, of Northwestern, 2 and 1. Johnson had Parker 1 down at the turn. Both were several strokes over par at that stage. The Hoya went 2 up with a win at the tenth. Parker took the eleventh and Johnson the twelfth. After halving the thirteenth and fourteenth, Johnson won the fifteenth, only to lose the sixteenth. A pair of par fours halved the seventeenth to end the match in Johnson's favor.

Richardson was favored to beat the Georgetown ace in the second round, but Johnson quickly forged in front by winning three of the first four holes. He held the lead to the turn and was 2 up at that point. Wins at the tenth and twelfth, both in par figures, put Johnson 4 up, but Richardson rallied strongly to take two of the next four holes. Johnson for the second time halved seventeenth in par fours to win.

Johnson was two over par for the 17 holes of his afternoon match. Pettijohn played a medal 38, one over par, to the turn to take a one up lead on Fraser. They halved only two holes on the out nine.

Pettijohn started slipping on the back stretch, losing the tenth and eleventh to Fraser's par fours. They halved 12 and 13 and Pettijohn picked up the fourteenth, to square the match.

The turning point came at the 234-yard sixteenth, which Fraser won with a deuce. The Creighton redhead rammed home a long putt for the win and then clung to his margin by halving the seventeenth and eighteenth in par figures. Their medal scores for the round were 74 for Fraser and 75 for Pettijohn. Fraser was even par on the back nine.

Dusek-Russell Opponents on Stadium Mat

Rough Rudy Dusek tangles with Bob Russell tonight in the main bout of Promoter Joe Turner's rassle-fest. But the real feature of the show involves the promoter himself.

Just before the principals take the mat, Turner will be presented with the American Legion's Gold Medal Award, in recognition of his aid in outfitting junior baseball teams sponsored by the veterans' association.

The remainder of the mat show involves Jack Kennedy and Jack Hader in a 30-minute time limit semifinal, and several preliminaries. George Lenihan meets Ed Meske; Henri Piers comes to grips with Jim Wright and Stanley Pinto squares off with Doug Wycoff in the supporting bouts.

Muehleisen, Lynch Capture Grand National Doubles Title

Lieut. Dolf Muehleisen and Hugh Lynch climaxed two weeks of sensational tennis yesterday, defeating Dooley Mitchell and Bill Howard in straight sets at Edgemoor to win the doubles championship of the Grand National tennis tournament.

The scores were 6—3, 6—4, 7—5. The court was wet, but not noticeably heavy.

The deciding factor of the keenly contested match was the remarkable overhead accuracy displayed by Muehleisen, No. 1 ranking Army player. Not once during the entire match was the officer guilty of an error in this department and at times returned eight or nine lobs in a blur of efficiency until Mitchell or Howard would err.

Although the winners were ranked second to the losers in pretournament seedings, the result was not surprising, for Muehleisen and Lynch swept into the finals with a record of not having lost a single set and had won 61 of 67 games.

Muehleisen and Lynch by their victory qualify for the eastern sectional tournament which will be held in New York July 26 to August 1 inclusive. Frances Grimes already has qualified by winning the women's singles title from Sarah Moore. A third qualifier will be the victor of the Dooley Mitchell-Yelverton Garnett finals match of the men's singles. This match twice postponed because of rain has been scheduled Saturday at Edgemoor.

Mitchell and Howard played with their usual skill yesterday but were outclassed. The overhead game performed by Muehleisen combined with steady net play on the part of Lynch converted the lobs of Mitchell and Howard into the necessary points.

In the final games of the match, with the outcome depending on each point, Muhleisen rose to the heights and was directly responsible for almost every point credited to his team by virtue of overhead smashes on lobs. He won the match point on one of these drives.

Bill Conn Wins Decision Over Teddy Yarosz

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 30.—Billy Conn, Pittsburgh middleweight, won a decision over Teddy Yarosz in their 12-round fight tonight, and with it took the Pennsylvania title. Both weighed 161.

Referee Al Graybar and Judge Jap Williams voted for Conn; Judge George MacBeth decided Yarosz won. Announcement of the decision brought a howling protest from the throng. Their pillow and newspaper barrage into the ring stopped briefly the closing bout.

The first three rounds were all Yarosz. Conn, a slow starter, had difficulty in evading the former champion's lefts and right crosses.

In the preliminaries, Walter Woods, of New York, 162 pounds, scored a technical knockout over Joey Duca, 159 pounds. In the rest period between the fifth and sixth rounds, Duca's handlers threw in a bowel. Duca was knocked down twice in the second round.

Davis Cup Juniors Win First Match

By Bob Garrison.

Visions of international competition transformed the wind-swept courts of the Army-Navy Country Club into the emerald grass courts of Wimbledon and Forest Hills for a group of aspiring young players yesterday as the Washington Junior Davis Cup squad registered an impressive victory over a similar team from Baltimore, nine matches to three.

Satisfied that his committee has selected a group of youngsters that will make strides toward national recognition under the proper handling, Maj. C. W. Christenberry, chairman of the local Junior Davis Cup Committee, watched his selections make a splendid showing in their intercity debut.

Davis Johnsen, playing in the No. 3 position, and Harry Maron, No. 5 man, came through with the day's most convincing performances with straight set wins over their opponents, but an even more impressive performance was given by Harry Heffner, No. 1 player, who defeated Lieut. C. A. Johnson, United States Navy Leech Cup player and former member of the Naval Academy team, in three sets.

Substituting for Harry Barclay, Baltimore ace, who did not make the trip, Lieut. Johnson, whose home is in the Monumental City, volunteered to meet Heffner in order to keep the competition keen. Heffner, however, took his older foe in a lengthy, well played match, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1. Nearly every point was taken after a long rally, with Heffner forcing Johnson into errors to win.

Johnsen defeated Dick Nelson, 6—2, 8—6, the wind handicapping Johnsen's game in the last set, sending it into extra games after he led 5—3. March played flawless tennis in defeating Phil Burkom, Junior City champion, of Baltimore, 6—4, 6—0.

Allie Ritzenberg, No. 2 of the squad, trounced his Maryland University freshman team partner, Nathan Askin, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2. Ritzenberg was the No. 1 man of the Terp frosh squad this year, Askin being rated just behind him.

Dick Turner, No. 4, was easily outclassed by his Baltimore foe, Barton Harvey, former Middle Atlantic Boys' Champion, 6—4, 6—1. Leon Strauss, of Baltimore's team, defeated Leonard Sokol, No. 8, 6—3, 6—3, and Doyle Royal, No. 7 of the local players, bowed to Melvin Rodman, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

Potent Forces Spur Inflation, KemmererSays

Economist Sees Rising Prices and Higher Cost of Living.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 30.—Forces making for inflation appear more powerful than counteracting influences and the prospects are for a period of rising commodity prices and a much higher cost of living, Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, Walker professor of international finance at Princeton University, said in an address here tonight at a general meeting of the Graduate School of Banking. The school is conducted jointly by the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University. Dr. Kemmerer listed the following as powerful inflationary forces now pushing prices upward:

"1. The devalued gold dollar and resulting inflow of gold from abroad accompanied with an increase of gold production which low commodity prices have stimulated.

"2. Our silver policy involving as it does an enormous expansion in the circulation of silver certificates.

"3. The Government's low interest rates and cheap money policy which encourages credit expansion.

"5. The flow of 'hot money' from abroad into the United States from war-scared Europe seeking security and profit in the United States.

"6. Our very heavy excess bank reserves, both in commercial banks and in the Federal Reserve banks.

"7. The prospects of rising velocities of bank-deposit circulation as business recovers from the depression.

Countering Inflation.

"Counteracting these inflationary forces there are four important forces. They are:

"1. The expansion of business as we work our way out of the depression which involves an increasing demand for money and bank-deposit credit.

"2. The improvement we have been having lately in the budgetary position of the national Government which is reducing somewhat the size of our annual deficit.

"3. The recently adopted policy of the Federal Reserve System in providing by administrative action taken under the authority of recent banking legislation for the doubling of legal reserve requirements of banks in the Federal Reserve System.

"4. The recent Government action providing for the sterilization of gold imports which prevent newly imported gold from being used as a reserve base for currency and credit expansion.

"The forces making for inflation at the present time appear to be more powerful than the counteracting forces and the prospects are therefore strong that we are facing a substantial period of rising commodity prices which will carry the cost of living to much greater heights than it is today."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance Moderately as Confidence Rises; Bonds Improve; Wheat Declines.

New York, June 30.—Financial markets improved on relief of some of the tension in the strike areas, brought about by signs that the Federal and State governments might do a little something to preserve order, and a natural reaction to excessive bearishness. Without much change in the small volume of trading stock prices rose in nearly all sections, the active issues rising 1 to 3 points. Bonds hardened all around. Grain ran into profit taking. September wheat closed 2⅛ cents lower at 120⅛ cents a bushel.

Railroad stocks rallied vigorously. Gains of more than a point were common. Santa Fe led with a rise of more than 3 points. Metal stocks moved up 1 to 3 points. Coppers were favorites. The market for all stocks was sensitive. Telephone climbed half a dozen points on a few sales involving 1,000 shares. A few stocks rose as much as 4 points. Steel opened half a point higher and then rested around 99, a gain of 2 points.

Motor moved with the trend. Chrysler sold into new low ground and then recovered. Philip Morris sold at a new high price, but other tobaccos were neglected. Foods did little; oils turned more active, with Pure a feature.

Early market prices were irregular to poor, but the best progress was made in the forenoon. Closing deals were fractionally under the best. The turnover of 750,000 shares was the largest in two weeks.

Low Confidence.

As business and markets come to the turn of the half year a definite change in conditions can be sensed. On balance the factors making for business activity and steady or rising markets seem to outweigh those working for recession, but recovery has lost its momentum. It may be said that the recovery stage of markets and business has been passed. Even greater activity may yet be experienced, but the recovery cycle has been completed. New innings will be played.

The financial difficulties of France, the war possibilities involved in the Spanish situation, the prospect for higher taxation, all give enough cause for anxiety to hold enterprise in check, but for the past two or three months easily the most depressing influence has been the attack upon industry by the organizers of the C. I. O. Markets have looked upon that phenomenon less as an effort of labor to win a larger share in industrial prosperity than as a definite war for power, with industry the victim and with the Government unfortunately a highly sympathetic onlooker at scenes in which civil rights have been disregarded.

Less worry has been spent over the actual property loss and the halt to business activity that has come from closed factories than over the realization that State and Federal governments have been strangely complacent over the whole matter. Signs now are appearing that some sense of danger is being felt. President Roosevelt at least recognizes that the public is becoming mightily fed up, if not fearful of what lies at the end of the road we are traveling. Given assurance that the Government is not going to give way before the demands of the labor organizers, the outlook is bright for a considerable revival in business activity this autumn. In that case there will be no cause for worry over depressed markets.

Bad Finance.

Meanwhile the end of the fiscal year comes with a blotched picture of Government finance. The deficit will fall but little short of three billions, in spite of the fact that the 12 months period it covers has been one of larger industrial employment seen in this country in any year, with the possible exception of 1928-1929, and with record-breaking receipts to the Government. A study of the figures for the past several years shows where the trouble lies—namely, in almost unbelievable peace-time expenditures. Receipts fell sharply in 1930, 1931 and 1932, and the recovery which began in the latter year did not proceed far enough to give the Treasury much additional revenue in the 1933 fiscal year.

From that time on receipts have rapidly increased, and in the year now closing they mounted to $5,260,000,000. The task set for the spenders was a herculean one, but they have met it with ease. As recovery proceeded, the spending also gathered momentum. From an outlay of $4,000,000,000 in the 1931 fiscal year, leaving a deficit of under a billion, a peak was reached last year, with the huge spending total of $8,880,000,000—appalling, in spite of the fact that an election was at stake.

HERE is a home for a family with vision. In its present condition it is most attractive, consisting of 7 large rooms (4 bedrooms) and 2 baths; wood-burning fireplace; G. E. refrigeration. Most important, however, is the fact that the beautiful large lot falls away at the rear, and will readily permit the transformation of the rear half of the basement into a complete summer kitchen or a delightful and unusual daylight playroom. Several natural springs in the rear yard suggest the possibility of a unique garden with natural waterscaping. But the most pleasant surprise is the price—$9,500, and only $1,000 down, the balance can be financed for 15 years. Inspect this home and agree that it is one of the best values in the Northwest section.

Tax Evaders Still Sought By D. C. Agents

Municipal Treasury Received $321,459 From 7,000 Delinquents.

Approximately 7,000 Washington residents who have been escaping taxes have been located through examination of the Federal income tax reports, Deputy Assessor Charles A. Russell revealed yesterday.

He added that the District will continue to search for delinquent personal property tax payers.

The 7,000 he cited paid into the municipal treasury $321,459 during the past year, but despite this unexpected "windfall," the District yesterday ended its fiscal year with a deficit which will be approximately $1,500,000.

Agents of the District began a thorough check on Federal income tax returns a year ago, in a desperate search for new funds to bolster a staggering budget. So successful were they in digging up tax-dodgers, the same tactics will be used on the 1936 returns, filed in March of this year.

Officials were surprised by the large number of delinquents the investigators uncovered—more than 17,000 who had not filed proper returns. The majority did not have sufficient property to become taxable, and the number finally sifted down to 7,000 who owed the District money.

For those who are unfamiliar with the law, Russell pointed out the rules of taxation are:

"Any person maintaining a place of adobe in the District of Columbia on July 1 and for three months prior thereto is liable to a tax on their intangible property.

"Tangible property, such as household furnishings, jewelry, boats, stock-in-trade, fixtures and anything else of a tangible nature are taxed regardless of the residence of the owner, if they are in the District of Columbia on July 1, 1937."

About 4,500 have not yet responded to letters sent out by the Assessor's office. These will be required to file returns during the next six months (for 1937), facing a penalty of 20 per cent for failure to comply.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor, said it may be a fortnight before final figures are compiled on the exact amount of the year's deficit. He said there remains in the Treasury a cash balance of $3,500,000, but that it has all been committed to other obligations.

Famous London Theater Purchased by Warners

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Alice Louise Hunter presents her dance group, assisted by Ray Williams, in a program of ballets and divertissements in Roosevelt High School auditorium Wednesday night. Music for "When the North Wind Doth Blow" arranged from Nevin and Schumann; music for "A Garden by Moonlight," composed by H. Jerome Graham. Pianists: Edith H. Hunter and H. Jerome Graham.

An interesting diversity of choreography and exponents of dancing graduated from young women already proficient sur les pointes to youngsters tripping their prentice steps characterized the program offered last evening by Alice Louise Hunter and her students. Ray Williams, of Baltimore, assisted in a solo dance, a classic pas de deux with Miss Hunter, and as the premier danseur in one of the ballets.

The opening ballet, "When the North Wind Doth Blow," had picturesque charm in its symbolism of the leaves, lucent in their greenery, tranfigured to brilliant hues by the touch of autumn, and shriveled to tawny dullness by the ruthless north wind. The color transitions were ingeniously effected by the discarding of superimposed costumes.

The participants in this skillfully planned and gracefully performed ballet were Margaret Riseling, Marjorie McGann, Priscilla Makela, Catherine Shea, Mary Lou Robertshaw, Beatrice Prata, Elsie Swann and Carol Shea as the leaves; Gloria Cone as Autumn, Betty Israel as Jack Frost, Kathlees Davis as Breath of Winter, and Eileen Jordan as North Wind.

Divertissements to the number of ten included Debussy's "Golliwogs Cake Walk," Chaikovski's "Valse des Fleurs," and a Rakhmaninov etude. They were for the most part exhilarant in mood, the one sombre note being Miss Hunter's macabre dance of a madman.

The fanciful and romantic ballet, "A Garden by Moonlight," had for its theme the longing of a poet for the inaccessible lady of the moon, a conceit well supported by the ornamental music by H. Jerome Graham. The principal roles were danced by Miss Hunter, Mr. Williams, Gertrude Elmendorf and Marjorie McGann, with litlte Sally Mae Graham as the stray moonbeam, while the other dancers flitted about as fireflies, moths, fairies and moon flowers.

On the Air Today

President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, will exchange "good neighbor" greetings tonight, on the occasion of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Canadian Federation—Canada as it is today. July 1 in Canada is known as "Dominion Day" and is celebrated somewhat in the same fashion as we do our Fourth of July.

The program which has been arranged by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be heard over the three Nation-wide networks. Here in Washington the broadcast will be carried by WMAL, WOL and WJSV, at 7:30 p. m.

The President will speak from his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., for approximately four minutes. Lord Tweedsmuir will speak from the studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Co., during a program which will include choral and band music.

Celebrating today also is Bing Crosby. Bing will vacation after his program tonight and that's something to celebrate. For his "going away party," America's No. 1 most popular male singer has gathered around him not one but three guest stars. Miss Toby Wing, dramatic actress; Roland Young, screen comedian, and Mischa Levitski, concert pianist, are the stars.

A grand program has been arranged so that Crosby's Arkansas sidekick, Bob Burns, won't feel too blue about his friend's departure. Burns is scheduled to remain with the summer show until October 7, when Crosby will return.

They're moving over at the N. B. C. studios in the National Press Building. Moving the furniture and the equipment to the new Trans-Lux Building. But the staff is still there, minus a couple of desks, chairs, rugs, window shades and tables. Lots of fun, they say.

Rumor has it that the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co. is about to add a dozen new branches in this southerly part of our country. The officials are mum, however.

It looked rather like old times to see Bob Trout, Columbia's ace announcer, having his breakfast at his favorite Washington restaurant, yesterday morning, just up the street from the WJSV studios. Remember, Bob is one of our local prides.

Readjustment Among Nations Urged by Hull

Many Conferences Needed for Peaceful Activity, He Asserts.

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday this country strongly feels that the time is "overripe" for substitution of a program of peaceful readjustment of international relationships for the present wild runaway armament race and what was termed cut-throat, trouble-breeding methods of trade between nations.

Commenting at his press conference on the recent visit here of Prime Minister Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium, the Secretary expressed the view there is occasion for numerous visits back and forth among statesmen and leaders of thought in every country to exchange information and ideas, and that the practice should be engaged in by an increasing number of countries.

There will be occasion, also, reporters were told, for many individual conferences and many communications. It was said, however, that no such conferences were in prospect at present, but the idea was advanced to illustrate the need for a thorough exchange of views and information.

It was pointed out that at the Buenos Aires peace conference basic ideas and objectives for the promotion of peace were proclaimed. While they were regional, insofar as the governments behind them were concerned, they were declared to be applicable in practically all important respects to other regions and other countries.

The spear-point in the conventions reached at Buenos Aires and just ratified by the United States Senate, is related to economic restoration, which carries with it, the Secretary said, the question of exchange and monetary stability as well as a cessation of military armaments.

Such an economic rehabilitation program, he pointed out, is based on the view that unemployed and hungry people cannot be organized successfully behind either a stable government, stable business or stable peace.

Tremor in the Azores.

Lisbon, Portugal, June 30 (AP).—A violent earth tremor was reported to have shaken Agraheroismo, in the Azores, today, spreading panic through the population. No casualties were reported.

Sheely Gives Up Matanuska Post

Palmer, Alaska, June 30 (U.P.).—Ross L. Sheely, agricultural expert, who chose the Matanuska Valley as site for the Federal Government's Alaskan resettlement project, resigned the general managership of the colony today without giving a reason.

His resignation will become effective August 1. Leo Jacons, assistant manager for the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation, will assume charge temporarily.

Sheely's job has been difficult. Charles Ruddell, formerly of Duluth, Minn., one of the first chosen by the Government to be removed from a drought-damaged farm, revolted. He left the colony and went to Washington, D. C., where he told officials Sheely was a virtual "czar." Ruddell exhibited affidavits from 125 colonists accusing Sheely and others with faulty management.

Glenn Frank to Speak.

Auto Ignition Barrier To Use of Television

By the Associated Press.

A radio expert said today automobiles of the future will have to carry "suppressors" on their ignition systems if television is ever to become practical.

J. E. Brown, of the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago, so testified at a Federal Communications Commission hearing. Present ignition systems emit radiations in millions of cycles in the broadcast bands which television uses, he said. Such radiations, he added, interfere seriously with the delicate synchronization of television broadcasts.

Married While Mind 'a Blank,' Brill Says in Annulment Trial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ventura, Calif., June 30.—William Brill 2d, wealthy Los Angeles sportsman, testified today that Nan Pierson Brooks Macy Brill, of the New York Blue Book, shanghaied him to the altar last March 29 after 14 hours of continuous drinking that left his mind blank.

During those hours, another witness said, he imbibed two bottles of beer, ten glasses of whisky and soda and three quarts of champagne.

The case, in which young Brill is asking an annulment of the marriage to the pretty Easterner, was taken under submission by Judge Edward Henderson.

"My mind was a blank," Brill testified. "I don't remember going to Yuma, singing the license, talking to the judge or marrying anybody."

"Was the marriage consummated?" the judge asked.

Brill said it was and Mrs. Brill's attorney, S. S. Hahn, asked if his mind was a blank at that time, too. Brill said it was not.

Brill said he woke up the previous morning in his automobile in San Diego. He said he was with Mrs. Macy and that she told him she was taking him to Mexico to marry him. He said he replied he couldn't afford to marry her, and anyway he had to hurry home.

Brill said they went to Tijuana, back to San Diego, to El Centro and then to Yuma. During that time he could remember some things but not others, among them the marriage.

Hours later he said he had another moment of consciousness, and the girl told him they had been married. So he said he took her to a hotel.

"Did Mrs. Brill force you to consummate the marriage?" Attorney Hahn asked.

He said she did not.
